LANSING NOW ELIGIBLE FOR MAIL DELIVERY

CHECK OF VILLAGE WILL BE INCLUDED IN APPLICATION

With business at the Lansing post office having passed the $5,000 mark for the year, thus making the town eligible for delivery service, questions are being directed at the post master by patrons of the office as to when the village would have the desired delivery service.

Another question that Mr. Koselke has been asked frequently is why the increased rate on post office box rental. This increased rent is not a raise in box rent, but just the advance made with the increased business of the office.

Box rental is based upon the business of the office, hence when the Lansing office business increased the box rent rate increased. This has always been a post office rule.

As to the delivery service, Mr. Koselke informs us that he is preparing to make a check of the village shortly. This check will list all streets, sidewalks and houses. The report from this check will go to Washington with the request for delivery service.

There are certain requirements that must be met before delivery service can be inaugurated. They are, all streets must be designated by street signs, all houses must be numbered, there must be sidewalks passable all year, and all blocks where delivery service is recommended must be 50 per cent built up. By 50 per cent built up is meant there be 8 or more houses in the block.

The check the postmaster will make of the village will give actual information as to what portions of the village fulfill the requirements.

Achievement Clubs Choose New Officers

Elections were the popular things in the public schools last week when the achievement club of each of the schools held their fall elections, conducting a pre-election campaign with three tickets in the field at Indiana avenue school and two tickets at Coolidge school.

Candidates nominated by popular acclaim were as follows: Indiana avenue school—Camel ticket, Dolores Palko for president, Emma Peters for vice-president, Nellie DeVries for secretary and Doris Larson for treasurer. Cobra ticket, Nancy Dyer for president, Bonny Martin for vice-president, Alfred Ollrich for secretary and Arthur Ollrich for treasurer. Lions ticket, John Haak for president, Gerald Ward for vice-president, Gilbert Dykhuisen for secretary and Guy Bogart for treasurer.

Election by ballot was held on Friday with the entire Cobra ticket going into office.

At the Coolidge school there were two tickets in the field to wit: Wildcats, Mary Jones for president, Janet Fulker for vice-president, Donald LaTulipe for secretary and Betty Lontz for treasurer. Tigers, Walter DeVries for president, Dorothy Ostrander for vice-president, Betty Jane McCloskey for secretary and Dolores Rentner for treasurer. The Tiger ticket won the election.

The object of the Achievement clubs, which are extra curricular activities in the Cook county schools, is to teach the children citizenship in the form of useful spending of leisure time, the development of hobbies and a general training in social intelligence.

Pointing out that fire losses are usually due to causes that might have been prevented, Governor Horner by proclamation designated the week beginning October 3 as Fire Prevention Week. The estimated fire loss of eleven million dollars in Illinois during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937 are 13 per cent less than in the preceding year, the governor stated.

No Paring Of Relief Rolls In Township

No paring of relief rolls in Thornton Township is anticipated according to a published statement from the office of the township supervisor this week. Under the system used in Thornton Township a periodical application is required of all indigents. This keeps a close check on the needs of the poor of the township and keeps on the relief rolls only those really in need.

REGISTER TUESDAY TO VOTE IN ANY FUTURE ELECTION YOU MUST REGISTER

Lansing is subject to the new permanent registration law passed by the last general assembly of the state, and to be able to vote in any future election all voters of the village, township and county must register in the permanent registration now being taken.

There are three polling places in the village, district 16 at the village hall, district 17 at the Methodist church and district 18 at the Ridgeway Motor Sales. District 17 is a new polling place, being used for the first time for the permanent registration.

Another new precinct, affecting the voters of this community is that with polling place at A. W. Niccum's Place, Thornton and Homewood Road just west of Oak Glen. This precinct, district 19 includes that part of the unincorporated lands lying south of the center line of 167th street, south of the south limits of the Village of South Holland, east of the east limits of the Village of Thornton, and west of the west limits of the Village of Lansing in the township of Thornton.

MARION FRANK, ELMER SCHULTZ WED SATURDAY

Wedding vows were repeated by Marion Frank and Elmer Schultz Saturday evening, September 25, at 5 o'clock before Rev. H. H. A. Harthun in St. John's Evangelical Lutheran church. The single ring ceremony was used.

The church was beautifully decorated with palms and gladioli. Mr. Ed. Streufert was at the organ playing the Lohengrin march as the bridal party entered the church and Mendelssohn's Wedding March after the ceremony for the exit from the church. Miss Marjorie Hoerz of Kankakee sang, "Take Thon My Hand and Lead Me".

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Frank of 3051 182nd Place, was gowned in white satin, the frock being made with lace inserts in the train and sleeves, a lace yoke and high collar of lace. The sleeves were cut with a long point over the hand. Her finger-tip length veil of tulle and lace was in Juliet style. She carried a colonial bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Lorraine Frank, sister of the bride, acted as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Madeline Schultz and LaVerne Busack. All three girls wore frocks of turquoise blue satin made with a slight train, a fitted jacket with a flare peplum. All carried colonial bouquets. Miss Lorraine's being made of pink

W. Oppenhuys To Wed Friday

Miss Winanda Oppenhuys, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Oppenhuys of 167th street and Torrence avenue will be married Friday, October 1, at 7:30 p. m. to Jacob Bagel of Harvey, Ill., with Rev. G. J. Rozeboom officiating.

The ceremony will take place at the home of the bride in the presence of close relatives. The couple expect to reside in Roseland.

CHILDREN TO SEE FAMED PLAYER HERE TOMORROW

Children of the two public schools of Lansing are to see three episodes of the life of Lincoln dramatized by the noted actor, John L. Parsons, Friday. The performances are to take place at the Coolidge school about 10:30 Friday morning and at the Indiana avenue school at 3:30 in the afternoon.

Because of the limited auditorium accommodations at the schools the plays will be given for the children only.

Arranged by the National Lincoln Society, the three sketches to be presented are highly dramatic, two of them being authentic instances from the life of Lincoln and the third an imaginative interpretation of what might have been. Mr. Parsons was chosen to represent Lincoln because of his excellent work in that character over a period of twenty years.

The sketches are being presented in all the schools of the region.

Octogenarian Honored By Kin On Birthday

Mr. John DeVolk of South Holland was the guest of honor at a birthday party given for him at the home of his daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Smit, September 23. The party was in celebration of Mr. DeVolk's 86th birthday.

Born in the Netherlands, Mr. DeVolk and his family came to America about 54 years ago, settling in Chicago, later taking farm land in the Dutch settlement south of the city. The DeVolk tribe increased until now there are eleven children, fifty-five grandchildren and fifteen great grandchildren. Fifty-eight of these descendants were present at last Thursday's party.

Mr. DeVolk is hale and hearty despite his many years and continues to work his farm land.

roses and baby breath, and the bridesmaids of yellow tea roses and baby breath.

Little Carol Jean Miller, acting as flower girl, was attired in a very short dress of the turquoise blue satin, tucked and completed with a large bow in the back. She carried a basket of pink and yellow roses.

Serving the groom as best man was Paul Hecht, Harold Baykov and Albert LaBahn acted as ushers.

Both Mrs. Frank and Mrs. Schultz, mothers of the bride and groom respectively, wore dresses of black crepe and corsages of yellow tea roses.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents at 7 o'clock with about 70 guests present.

Mr. and Mrs. Schultz are making their home in the apartment in the rear of the State Line Service Station. Mr. Schultz is part owner of the station. Both are graduates of Thornton Fractional high school. Mrs. Schultz has been employed by the Associates Investment company of Hammond until a month ago

REFORMED CHURCH TO HOLD ENGLISH SERVICE SUNDAY

MEETING AT INDIANA AVENUE SCHOOL TO RELIEVE CONGESTION

Announcement was made this week from the First Reformed church of the holding of all English preaching service in the Indiana Avenue public school beginning next Sunday, October 3.

These meetings are designed to relieve the over-crowded condition at the First Reformed church according to the announcement.

A few months ago a committee of the Consistory and the congregation suggested the possibility of organizing an all English Second Reformed church. The newly scheduled meetings which will be held from Sunday to Sunday are to encourage this suggestion.

An invitation has been extended to everyone in this community to attend these services.

Preaching services will be held at the school Sunday morning at 9:30 and again in the afternoon at 2:30. Rev. Howard Scholten, home missionary for the Synod of Chicago, will be in charge.

REGISTRATION MONDAY, LOW

Either folks didn't think about the permanent registration which got under way Monday or are putting off until the last minute the task of having their names placed on the registration rolls of the state.

Only 460 voters registered in all three precincts, which, comparing figures with the number of votes cast in the last village election, leaves almost one thousand persons yet to register.

In precinct number 16, which is that part of the village lying east of the center line of Burnham avenue, there were 210 voters registered, in precinct number 17, west of Burnham and east of School street, only 106 persons registered. Precinct number 18, west of School street to village limits west, 140 persons were registered.

There were 1401 votes cast in the village election last spring, and all indications are that there has been a considerable increase in the population of the village since that time, so it is to be concluded that the registration officials will be doubly busy next Tuesday which is the second day designated by law for the taking of the permanent registration.

Under the new law which was passed by the general assembly in its last session counties in the state with a population over 500,000 must make a permanent registration of all voters. Persons moving will be able to have their names transferred to the registrar of their new precinct.

By this new legislation, according to officials of the county and state, it is expected to eliminate election frauds, and also allow for home rule in towns and villages. The home rule phrase is interpreted to mean that small towns or cities may hold local election on any question that might come up affecting only that community without waiting for a general election.

IN THE SPOT LIGHT

Most citizens of the United States love a good show, they're suckers for the dramatic, they'll fall for anyone or anything if the act is good, and feel as though they had their money's worth. But they can also detect the instant the actor goes stale. A ham is tolerated with little patience.

During the past few years we have responded to a master showman. A man with a highly developed sense of the dramatic, we've paid the bills of the character acting of all the letters in the alphabet and kept a fair semblance of a grin on our faces, but the recent surprise dance has released a stink bomb that can be smelled from coast to coast and may clear the theatre.

We've watched the magician extract the independence and self respect from thousands of our fellowmen and applauded the efficiency with which it was done. We've gotten a laugh out of the WPA "Men Working" signs we've coined new words and phrases that had an amusing ring to them, and paid the bills or assumed the responsibility for them.

As a whole we've patched up the rags of depression, bought the wife a new coat and kept shoes on the kids, and if we had any time after that was done we've turned an eye to Washington where the big show was on. We've carried on the American traditions.

But there is one thing we can't do. That is, condone the placing upon the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States a man pledged to an invisible empire whose principles and objectives are bigotry and intolerance, racial and religious hatred, whose activities cannot stand the light of day but must go about the country hooded like some foul thing.

The appointment of Senator Black of Alabama, if he is proven to be a member of the Ku Klux Klan, is an act on the great American stage that will call for and receive the overripe vegetables of the hoods from the gallery as well as the boos from the boxes.

BUILDING TO BURN

The first five minutes of a fire are more important than the next five hours.

T. Alfred Fleming, of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, quotes a number of instances of fires which became uncontrollable within an incredibly short time after their discovery. For example, a clothing factory in an Eastern city took fire at 2:30. By 2:35 the building was such an inferno that firemen could not endure the radiated heat across the street and 35 factory employes had already been cremated.

The main remedy for this condition is safer construction. It is much cheaper to fight a fire at the architectural drawing board than at the hydrant. But safer construction cannot be achieved until building codes in towns, large and small, are revised and modernized. Not long ago a review was made of the building codes in 281 municipalities containing 81 per cent of the population of a state. An alarming proportion of these codes were found to be inadequate and out of date.

New discoveries bring new hazards. Air-conditioning, for example, breeds fire hazards not provided for in the codes of 99 out of 100 cities, according to Mr. Fleming. A truly adequate building code must cover such contingencies as this. Improper ventilating systems are another prime cause of fires. In recent years there have been a score or more of total loss fires in schools where ventilating systems were completely responsible.

Fire Prevention Week which begins October 3, should inspire every community to scientifically examine its code in the light of needed revision—and if it has no code, to start preparing one. Don't build to burn!

LA GUARDIA BOOM

Biggest political job in the U. S. is the Presidency. Second biggest, many think, is mayor of New York. That is why a New York contest is an event of national significance and interest.

The recent election proved two things—one, New York voters still like the New Deal—both democratic candidate Mahoney and Republican candidate La Guardia supported its principles. Second, Tammany is very much on the skids—it threw its whole weight behind Senator Copeland, who ran in both primaries, and he was badly beaten in each.

The Democratic machine is Mahoney's biggest asset. La Guardia has no machine—but he is a colorful, vote-getting personality, has made a remarkable record for efficiency and honesty as mayor, and has practically all the New York newspaper support.

There is a movement, started by William Allen White, to boom La Guardia for the Republican presidential nomination in 1940. White calls him "Another Lincoln".

ILLINOIS VIEWS

Illinois miners produced 3,005,108 tons of coal from 95 shaft and 25 strip mines during the month of August, according to James McSherry, State Director of Mines and Minerals. This production is approximately a quarter of a million tons under that of August last year.

"Religion occupies a central position in the progress of the nation and plays an important part in the lives of our fellow-citizens," Governor Horner said in a statement in which he urged Illinois citizens to attend their places of worship on October 2 and 3, designated as "Loyalty Days" by the National Committee for Religion and Welfare Recovery.

Preliminary reports indicate that 1937 will be a good year for Illinois popcorn growers. Illinois last year held second place in the United States in popcorn production, its harvest of 10,056,000 pounds being exceeded only by the state of Texas.

Two cents of each dollar provided for Old Age Assistance in Illinois is expended for burials and eight cents for administrative costs, while the remaining ninety cents goes for assistance payments, according to a large chart displayed in the Springfield offices of the State's Old Age Assistance Division. In June of this year, 115,000 persons—one-fourth of the state's population aged 65 or over—received Old Age Assistance.

Forty-one classifications were included in the positions for which the State Civil Service Commission held examinations last week at various Illinois points. More than four thousand candidates for the positions appeared. The position of lodging house inspector attracted the largest number of candidates, with the position of assistant chief clerk, junior interviewer, junior department bookkeeper and assistant cashier ranking next in popularity in the order named.

An active demand for Illinois fishing licenses is reported by the State Conservation Department. Sales are far ahead of those for last year. The department uses the funds obtained from sales of licenses in stocking lakes with game fish, operating fish hatcheries and enforcing fishing laws.

wellers seem to be doing alright because they took all three from the First Federal Savings and Loan last Wednesday night. State Lane hit high game for the week with a total of 908. The fact that the boys on this team were hot, enabled them to win two from the strong Kraay Brothers outfit. Mikos came to life after taking three on the chin last week and won three this week from the Legion boys. Ridge Road Gardens clipped the Lions tail three times on Thursday night while the Brickmakers took two away from the Knot-holes on Friday night. Melvin Vierk helped the Brickmakers considerably when he rolled a 607 series which was also the high series for the week in League 1. Hank Griese hit high game with a 228.

In League 2 there is quite a tussel for first place between Padjen and the Lansing Pharmacy. Lansing Pharmacy won its last seven games straight. This week their victim was the Lansing Motors team. Padjen took Hopman Cleaners down for three to stay in a tie with the Pharmacy boys for first place. Paul Hecht shot a good series of 559 and his best game was 213 but this did not help his Hopman team to win. Meeters defeated Slagers twice as did Gids take two from Louie.

Have you ever caused someone to be injured? Have you ever been called upon to perform the painful duty of notifying the mother of several children that her husband has been killed in an accident?

If ever you are assigned such duty, you will realize the importance of safety and accident prevention. The grief that can strike a home so suddenly should make us all realize that we are a part of this entire scheme and that each and everyone of us should cooperate with everybody else in the prevention of accidents on our highways, in our home, and at our place of work.

SYNOPSIS

Brooke Reyburn visits the office of Jed Stewart, a lawyer, to discuss the terms of an estate she has inherited from Mrs. Mary Amanda Dane. Unwittingly she overhears Jed talking to Mark Trent, a nephew of Mrs. Dane who has been disinherited. Mrs. Dane had lived at Lookout House, a huge structure on the sea, built by her and Mark's father. Brooke had been a fashion expert, and Mrs. Dane, a "shut-in," hearing her on the radio had invited her to call and developed a deep affection for her. Mark discloses that Mrs. Dane had threatened to disinherit him if he married Lola, from whom he is now divorced. He says he does not trust Henri and Clotilde Jacques, Mrs. Dane's servants. Leaving her department store job, Brooke refuses an offer to "go stepping" with Jerry Field, a carefree young man who wants to marry her. At a family conference she learns she must live at Lookout House alone, since Lucette, her younger sister who is taking her job, and her mother plan to stay in the city. Jed and Mark are astounded when they hear from Mrs. Gregory, a family friend, that she had witnessed a hitherto unknown will with Henri and Clotilde two weeks before Mrs. Dane died. Brooke has arrived just as she was leaving. Jed suggests that Mark open his part of Lookout House, get friendly with Brooke and try to find out about the will. Jed agrees to stay with him. Mark accepts Brooke's invitation for a family Thanksgiving dinner at Lookout. Mrs. Reyburn announces on Thanksgiving eve that she has been invited to England. Sam and Lucette decide to move in with Brooke and Sam plans to produce a new play locally. After the Thanksgiving dinner Brooke tells Mark that little of Mrs. Dane's silver collection is left. Jerry Field and his sister Daphne drop in and announce they will be neighbors for the winter. Later Inspector Harrison of the local police visits Mark and is informed about the missing will and silver. As Harrison leaves, Lola arrives. She announces that she and her new husband, Bert Hunt, have started a neighborhood filling station. Mark almost makes a break about the missing will and Brooke is suspicious. Returning home, she sees Lola talking covertly to Henri. Henri is ugly and warns Brooke she had better like him and Clotilde. That night while the cast of Sam's play is rehearsing and the Jacques are away, Mark shows Brooke the missing silver which he had found cached in an unused upper floor store room in his house. He reveals that the door connecting their houses has been unlocked. A black gloved hand pulls the key from the storeroom door. Arriving home that night, Mark receives a call from Lola telling him she has an interesting document to sell him. After retiring, Mark thinks he hears Jed call. He finds he has disappeared.

His eyes followed the light. In his amazement he lost his balance and pitched forward. At one corner of the railing, blinking and shivering in the glare, huddled the run-away green parrot.

Held up by a bird! He slid to the balcony. Reached for Mr. Micawber, grabbed him, flung him into the room behind him. He could hear the parrot squawking with fury as he closed the window.

"That seems to be that! Now, where's Jed?"

He peered over the railing. No uprights on this balcony to slide down. The next one had iron trellises which connected it with the stone terrace. Had Jed entered Lookout House by the window? Who occupied the room of the next house which opened on it? He would investigate.

He tiptoed to the window, reduced the light in his torch before he flashed it over the glass. The shade was closely drawn and the sash locked. No one could have gone in there. Cracks of light were visible in the two rooms beyond where French windows opened on another balcony. Had Jed entered that lighted room? How could he get there? He was too stout to swing across. Could he himself do it?

He appraised the distance, stepped over, and swung. Cautiously he stepped over the rail and ripped his hands from the frosty iron.

With his heart drumming like an airplane motor he concentrated his attention on the window. A crack of light showed between the hangings. Whose room was it? Should he take a chance that it was Sam's or Brooke's and tap lightly?

A window was being opened cautiously. Where? He flattened himself against the house. Must be the end balcony outside the studio. He visualized the interior as he had seen it the day he had helped Jerry Field sketch in the tree trunks on the backdrop. Someone was crawling out! A man! He was sliding down an iron trellis like a monkey! Now he was running across the lawn bent double! He was entering the garage!

Mark Trent crammed the electric torch into his pocket and swung a leg over the railing. He hitched along till his feet found an upright, went down hand over hand, his palms sticking painfully to the iron as he moved them.

From purple tree shadow to purple tree shadow he skulked. Near the garage he hid behind shrubs. The click of a lock! He held his breath as he listened. Who had been in the Lookout House garage at this time of night? Whoever it was, was leaving. He could hear cautious footsteps. An automobile starting! He strained his ears. It was speeding down the street toward the causeway. That didn't prove anything, it would be easy enough to turn into a side road and cut back. Was the man who had sneaked from the house driving? Had he stolen the car? Even so, he couldn't follow it, he must find out why he had entered the garage.

He crept to a window and peered in. Dark as pitch except for a white blur. That must be the cover of Aunt Mary Amanda's old limousine. Why was the unused car directly opposite the door? He remembered now. Jed had told him that he had offered Henri Jacques had reported for the out-of-date machine. Probably the butler had planned to drive it off in the morning.

The man who had just made his get-away had stopped here. Why? Had he hidden loot? The silver? But the silver had been in the storeroom only a few hours ago. A few hours! Much could happen in a few hours while the occupants of the Other House had been at supper at the Reyburns'. He'd better investigate. Lucky he still carried the key to his aunt's garage on his ring. In the days when they had been friendly, she had insisted upon his having a key to the house as well. Soundlessly he slid back the door, squeezed in, closed and locked it.

With the light in his torch dimmed, he tiptoed carefully between the automobiles. Brooke's long, sleek town car. Sam's convertible coupe. The white cloth cover of the old limousine was awry as if it had been hastily adjusted. Part of it lay on the floor. What was that mark? A footprint! A footprint faint but bloody!

With a childish impulse to clutch their coats and keep the men with her, Brooke Reyburn had listened to the closing of the door behind Mark Trent and Jed Stewart. They had pleaded an early morning start for the city, but she was sure that they had gone because they resented Jerry Field's sulky silence. She would have been glad to get away from his gloomy presence herself. She glanced at him as he stood before the fire. From the back of the house came the crash of dishes, a shout of laughter.

Brooke sprang to her feet. "I wonder what went then. I suspect that Lucette and Sam started rough-housing and that Daphne was drawn into the scuffle. I should have known better than to let them wash the dishes. Come on, Jerry. Let's investigate. I'd rather know the worst at once."

Field straightened and thrust his hands hard into his pockets.

"Same here, Brooke. I want to know what you were doing in Mark Trent's house while we were at rehearsal."

"Why should you think I had been in his house?"

"Didn't Stewart find a gardenia outside his front door?"

"So what? I suppose there couldn't be another woman in the world who might call on Mr. Trent wearing a flower, or did you corner the gardenia market today, Jerry?"

Field's expression changed from gloom to cheer.

"There's something in that. Trent certainly is a wow with the ladies. I hear that he could dine out three times an evening if he'd accept the invitations heaped on him. It gets me why he settled down in this burg. Don't be sore at me, sweet thing. Wasn't it natural for me to think the flower yours when Stewart produced the gardenia that he found at Trent's front door when you weren't wearing any?"

Before she could answer she heard someone approaching.

She drew a breath of relief as Sam and the two girls entered.

"What smashed in the kitchen, Sam? I thought the chimney had fallen in."

"Nothing but a stack of those warranted unbreakable plates Clotilde keeps things on in the ice-box. And did they crack up? The floor looked as if there'd been a snowstorm."

"The sound brought Henri down the back stairs in a hurry. Ever seen him in his robe de nuit, Brooke?"

"What a giggler you are, Lucette! Of course I haven't."

"You've missed the laugh of your life. He was something straight out of a Cruikshank edition of Dickens.

Her Heart Mounted to Her Throat and Stuck There.

Night cap with tassel; night shirt. I believe it was called back in the dark ages; thin bow legs, and flapping slippers."

"Was he embarrassed?"

"He was not. He behaved more as if he were afraid we'd miss the appeal of his costume. He ran around like this." She trotted across the floor.

Lucette frowned at Field. "Can't you smile for the lady, Jerry? I'll tell you one thing. I'd rather be a giggler than a gob of gloom. Good-night!" She dashed from the room. Daphne ran into the hall.

"Lucette, don't forget that Mark Trent is giving us a party tomorrow night at that swell new Supper club."

Lucette hung over the mahogany rail. "Forget! Not a chance. Think I'll forget a night off from rehearsal? Nothing short of an act of God will keep me away. Sam, the old tyrant, is giving us a break. I'll be seeing you."

Jerry Field picked up his sister's coat.

"Come on, Daph, let's go. If I'd known that we were to have a night off, I would have taken you dining and dancing, Brooke."

"Nice of you, but I think that a party will be heaps more fun."

"You would think that. I don't know why but this whole evening has gone haywire. Come on, Daph."

Daphne Field snuggled her hand in Sam Reyburn's.

"Good-night, Sammy. Don't love me much, do you, darling?"

Sam shook off her hand. "I'll love you when you learn your lines, and what's more, if you don't learn 'em, you'll be tossed off the lot."

"You mean that I'll be fired?" Daphne opened her eyes at their widest. "I, fired, after I've had gowns made to wear that will simply stop the show? Come on, Jerry. Nobody likes us here."

From the threshold she threw a kiss to Sam.

He grinned.

"Sam, do you like Daphne?" asked Brooke.

"She's good fun. Swell looker, isn't she?"

In the room she had made her boudoir, Brooke slipped out of the lace frock. If only she could shed with it the haunting sense of having said the wrong thing. She had been bitterly unkind when she had reminded Mark Trent of his divorce. If she could apologize to him and get it off her mind, it would help. Well, she couldn't. Perhaps if she wore the hair shirt of remorse for a while, it would teach her to guard her tongue.

In a heavily embroidered Chinese house-coat of vivid green, she pulled forward the chair at her desk and began writing a letter to her mother.

Suddenly she looked up at the mirror, and her heart mounted to her throat and stuck there, beating, beating. Reflected in the looking-glass, the silver-shot hanging between bedroom and boudoir filled and swung like the sail of a boat. What had set it in motion? Had a window been opened? She was too far from the bell to ring. Suppose she rang? Who would answer? Henri and Clotilde were locked in their room probably. What should she do? She stared at the mirror. How could a person get in? From the balcony under the bath-room window? That meant that he had come through Mark Trent's house. Was it the black-gloved man who had been in the attic this evening?

She swallowed her heart. She couldn't sit here forever. She must move. How still the room was! The silence of fear enveloped her like a cold mist and turned her fingertips to ice. Perhaps she was in a nightmare and could waken herself. Glorious thought. She'd scream.

Her mouth remained open as a hatless man in blue denim slipped past the swaying hanging. His head was wet and sleek as a seal's; his face below his eyes—bad eyes—was so thickly plastered with white as to be unrecognizable. He gave one furtive glance over his shoulder before he flitted in ghostly silence from the room.

Brooke pulled out the drawer of her desk. It crashed to the floor spilling the contents. Maddening! It would do that when she was in a hurry. On her knees she scrambled after an electric torch which had rolled under a chair. She dashed to the hall. Who was the man? What was the stuff on his face? She'd never forget those wicked eyes above a smear of white. The house was dark and still. She ran toward Sam's room. Stopped. Better not start him on a man hunt. He was so impetuous. How did she know that the intruder hadn't a gun? She must go Scotland Yard herself.

The hall clock told the hour. The sound echoed through the house. Only twelve? It seemed hours since she had said good-night to Sam in the living-room, and years since Mark Trent and Jed Stewart had gone home. She tiptoed to the balustrade and listened.

A squeak! She put her hand hard over her heart to stop its thumping. Was a window being opened cautiously? If only the wind would stop for a minute.

Had the squeak come from the next room which was being used for scenery? It had a small iron balcony like the one which connected Lookout House and Mark Trent's. A person might easily slide down the trellis.

She tiptoed into the room and closed the door softly behind her. This must be the window that had squeaked; it was wide open. It had been closed this afternoon when she had come in to scatter green paint on the flats and to give another splash of red to the peak of roof on the backdrop.

She flashed her light around the room then on the floor over which a sheet had been spread. A can of red paint had been overturned! It was sluggishly spreading.

Tipped over recently! Slowly Brooke's light traveled. A red footprint! Uncannily like a bloody one. The man must have stepped into the thick paint. Another! One beyond that under the window. Cautiously she followed the trail. A smooch of red on the window sill. He had gone that way. Was he on the balcony? What would she see if she looked out? She must look out. She wouldn't close her eyes tonight unless she knew that the man had gone—where, she wouldn't care, if he were gone.

She leaned out cautiously. There was nothing human in sight, only a one-eyed moon was watching through a maze of branches. Cold winter moonlight turned a towering hemlock to purple, shadows to amethyst, and scattered a shimmering trail of golden topaz on the dark water of the harbor. Had one of the shadows moved down by the tree?

It had. That meant that the man was out of the house! She cautiously closed and locked the window. Pulled the hangings across it. That was that! She curtained the other window, turned to switch on the wall light. Stopped. The door was opening! A glare of light. Had the man come back? Had he a pal? Had her heart parked in her throat forever? She couldn't see, but she could still hear:

"Well, for the love of Mike!"

The wall light snapped on.

Brooke's blood, which she had thought frozen, surged through her veins. Sam was staring at her, Sam in pink and white pajamas which made him look for all the world like an animated stick of striped candy. His copper colored hair was on end; without his spectacles his eyes were big and dark and vague. He shook her arm.

"Hey! Snap out of it, Brooke! Have you got that darn scenery so on your mind that you're walking in your sleep to sling paint in here?"

Brooke swallowed the lump in her throat.

"I wasn't asleep, Sam, and I wasn't slinging paint. I heard something." Her voice sounded hoarse to herself.

"A window being opened? That's what I heard. But how could you get here so soon?"

Breathlessly she told him of the man who had slipped through her room, of following him into the hall.

"You're kidding! No? Then why didn't you yell for me?"

"You're so reckless, Sam, I was afraid you might be hurt."

"That's the funniest thing I ever heard. How about yourself? Beat it back to bed. Sam the boy sleuth is hot on the trail."

"You mustn't go downstairs."

"Who says I mustn't. I'll snoop around outside to be sure the guy has gone. Beat it."

"If you go down, I go too."

"Oh all right, all right. I know better than to argue with you when you use that tone, Brooke. Got a flash? We'll creep down the back stairs. Follow me. We'll get into the front of the house that way."

He switched out the wall light, opened the door and stood motionless, listening.

"Let's go!"

Brooke nodded in response to his whisper. The hall seemed miles long as she tiptoed through the dark; the back stairs endless in number as she stole down, stopping at every creak, holding her breath at every sound which echoed as if amplified in the walls.

Sam stopped at the kitchen door to listen. Crept on to the front hall. Brooke controlled an hysterical urge to laugh as she stole after him.

"The Reyburns go sleuthing," she thought, and chuckled.

She felt Sam's quick turn and glare, though she couldn't see it. The turn was catastrophic. He lurched into a chair. His muttered, "Thunder!" was submerged in a hoarse command:

"Don't move! I've got you covered!"

JUMPER TELLS PETER WHO THE STRANGER IS

PETER RABBIT could hardly believe what he had seen—the big black stranger, with the great terrible claws, backing away from Jimmy Skunk, and Jimmy acting just as if he were in the habit of meeting this stranger every day and making him get out of his way.

Peter was full of wonder and excitement as he hurried away to tell all whom he should meet what he had seen. He didn't know who the stranger was. Never had he seen anyone like him in the Green Forest.

"Oh, Jumper! Cousin Jumper! I've seen him!" cried Peter just as soon as he was near enough to make himself heard.

Jumper sat up and looked at Peter curiously. "Supposing you tell me whom you've seen," said he quite as if he had no particular interest in the matter.

"Why, the stranger! The great big stranger who made those tracks in the snow I told you about and whom you tried to find and couldn't. I saw him just a few minutes ago! Who do you suppose he is, and do you suppose he has come to the Green Forest to stay?"

"How should I know?" replied Jumper the Hare. "Suppose you tell me something about him. What does he look like?"

"Well, he's big," began Peter. "He's bigger than anyone else in the Green Forest. Why, he's as big as Farmer Brown's boy! He wears a black fur coat. He stands on two legs and he walks on four legs, and he hasn't any tail."

Jumper yawned just as if he weren't the least bit interested. "I've heard all that before from Sammy Jay," said he.

"And don't you believe it?" cried Peter.

Jumper the Hare smiled at Peter, and Peter knew right away by that smile that his big cousin had been teasing him. "Yes," said he, "I believe it because—well, because I have seen him myself."

"You have?" cried Peter, "and do you really know who he is?"

Jumper nodded. "Yes," said he, "he's an old acquaintance of mine."

"Who?" demanded Peter, his eyes popping out with excitement. "Tell me quick, who is he?"

"He's someone I used to know when I lived in the Great Woods before I came to live in the Green Forest on the edge of the Green Meadows," replied Jumper, speaking so slowly that Peter thought he would never get it out.

"But what's his name? Do tell me his name, Cousin Jumper," implored Peter.

"His name," replied Jumper slowly, very slowly, while Peter held his breath and leaned forward with eyes and ears and mouth wide open. "His name is—"

"Is what?" cried Peter.

"Is Buster Bear," replied Jumper the Hare.

DOUBLE WINDOWS FOR CASEMENTS

DURING the warm times of year, casement windows that swing outward are certainly attractive. This is not only for appearance, but for the full ventilation that comes with the opening of an entire window space.

When there are two or more casement windows in a room, it is unusual for more than one to be opened during bitter weather. This being so, all of the windows but one can be kept closed, and ordinary double windows put on outside.

frame of wood molding, fitted to the inside of the window frame. The molding should have good-sized handles attached to it, so that it can be easily moved, and when in place, it is held by simple bolts or turn-bolts.

Double windows raise the temperature of a room by many degrees. There is far less chilling of the space near a window, and drafts in the room are greatly cut down. Double windows are well worth whatever they may cost.

Cleaning a Gilded Frame.

Gilding of a high quality picture frame is with gold leaf, which is so thin that it will not stand rubbing. To clean a soiled and stained frame, make a half-and-half mixture of denatured alcohol and household ammonia. Apply it to the gilding with a soft camel's-hair brush.

What Is It? Dinner, Lunch or Supper?

DEAR Mrs. Post: A friend of mine insists that no matter what is served, the meals of the day in their order are called breakfast, lunch and dinner, and a light evening meal is supper. I maintain that if a person eats a full course meal at noon it is called dinner.

Answer: Meticulously speaking, dinner, no matter whether served at mid-day or in the evening, begins with soup in plates set on a tablecloth, and is followed by meat and vegetables, and there is no cup and saucer for a hot beverage on the table. It is the tablecloth and the soup in the soup plate, and the absence of cups and saucers, that classifies the meal as dinner.

Sending Announcements.

DEAR Mrs. Post: My only relatives are my aunt and my brother, and under the circumstances I am not going to have a very large wedding and will not send any invitations. But I would like to send announcements to our friends everywhere.

Answer: Either would be proper although somewhat depending upon circumstances. If your aunt has brought you up and your brother is younger than you, then the invitations would certainly go out in her name.

Ask Her Alone.

DEAR Mrs. Post: Is it necessary to ask the friends with whom a friend of mine is visiting to go out with us? I have always done this but this year things are different and I haven't much money.

Answer: Under practically all circumstances one is free to ask one's friend and not the persons with whom she happens to be staying, especially if the latter are strangers.

Substitute for Spouse.

DEAR Mrs. Post: You have written that to all general parties such as receptions and musicales a wife may accept an invitation for herself and send regrets for her husband.

Answer: She could do this only in the house of someone whom she knows well enough to call on the telephone and ask if she may bring whoever it is in "John's" place.

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

For the Seamstress.—Before stitching heavy materials, like khaki, duck or canvas, rub hard soap over the hems and seams. The needle will then penetrate the material more easily.

For Baking Cakes.—The center of the oven usually has the most even heat and is therefore best for cake baking.

Heat-Retaining Tea Cosy.—When next you make a tea cosy, try lining it with chamois leather. The leather retains the heat so well that the tea will keep really hot in the teapot to the very last drop.

Discouraging Ants.—Prompt disposal of garbage and other waste materials around the home will aid in the control of ants.

Sliding Drawers.—Laundry soap rubbed on dresser drawers that stick will make them work easy.

Cleaning Black Frocks.—Black frocks which have become marked with powder may be cleaned quite easily by being rubbed with crumbed, dry, stale bread.

Good Thoughts For Good People

Unless we learn to do our duty, to those whom we employ, they will never learn to do their duty to us.

—Charles Dickens

We have committed the Golden Rule to memory; let us now commit it to life.

—Edwin Markham

Assuredly we are members of one another in a deeper sense than we can fathom; and the acknowledgment of this truth must be the beginning of the Christian practice.

—Bishop Creighton

When too many people think only of themselves and profits, irrespective of their fellow men and the service rendered, it is always possible to foresee a business collapse. When, however, fifty-one per cent of the people see the error of such a selfish program and begin again to think of the other fellow, then business begins to improve.

—Roger Babson

Blessed is that man who seeth his brother's need and suppleth it, seeking his own in another's good.

—Mary Baker Eddy

If there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not. For I mean not that other men be eased and ye burdened; But by an equality that now at this time your abundance may be a supply for their want, that their abundance also may be a supply for your want.

T. F. METEOR

Written by students of Thornton Fractional Twp. High School

Mr. Christian, Thornton Fractional's band master, has introduced a new and attractive method for band organization. Eight important and responsible positions are held by various band members. Mr. Christian and Arthur Larson, student manager, have appointed the band officials as follows: Student Director Staff, Reed Buffington, chairman; Don Williams, Roy Blank; Publicity manager, Naomi Frevert; Librarian, Adeline Bolek; Recorder, Charles Gillette; Property manager, Claude Patterson; Secretary, Lorraine Annen; Cheer Leader, Leonard Ferguson.

The T. F. Girls' Athletic Club under the sponsorship of Miss Adeline C. Jaacks is working especially to promote freshmen girls' interest in athletics. To be a member of this club, each girl must earn 100 points which are obtained by attending daily practice after school and being a member of one of the following teams: volleyball, captain basketball, basketball, swimming and baseball. The T. F. monogram is the award toward which all G. A. C. members work. This honor requires 1000 points plus a record for sportsmanship, scholarship and citizenship.

Thornton Fractional's principal clubs are commencing their activities for the coming year. The Girls' Club with Miss Anna Schmidt as dean of girls and the following officers, president, Kay McCloskey; vice president, Genevieve Jablonski; secretary, Virginia Lewandowski; treasurer, Anita Bohling have all ready made extensive plans for activities in which practically every girl in school may take part.

The Boys' Club, under the direction of Mr. L. Miller, is organized in the same manner and for the same purpose as the Girls' Club. The boys have not elected their officers for coming year.

The News Hawks is a club composed of members who have earned 1,000 points through working for the school paper or the year book. The officers for the year are president, Kay McCloskey; vice-president, Ruth Sibley; secretary-treasurer, Grace Larson.

MODERN SINBAD WRITES JOURNAL FROM MANILA

George W. Mueller, Lansing's Modern Sinbad the Sailor, is still seeking adventure on the high seas according to a post card received from him this week by the Journal. The card was mailed August 31 in Manila. Mueller states on the card that he expected to leave for Shanghai, China, about September 2. He said his boat made the crossing from San Francisco to Manila in 29 days, dodging typhons and various other sorts of bad weather prevalent along the coast of Japan, China and the Philippine Islands from May to November.

Mr. Mueller, it will be recalled

So romantic were the stories that we yielded to the temptation of naming him the Modern Sinbad the Sailor, which name he evidently appreciates, since he signed the card "Modern Sinbad".

"IT LOOKS THE SAME BUT THERE'S A DIFFERENCE!"

"DURING the depression we felt we ought to cut expenses everywhere. We didn't want to give up our telephone entirely, so we changed to a party line. And it was very satisfactory, considering everything. I haven't any complaint to make about it at all.

"But how nice it is to have an individual line again! It's our own telephone now. No one uses it except ourselves. There are no delays waiting for other people to finish talking. And it costs only a few cents a day more than the party line did. John wonders why we waited this long to change back."

Wouldn't you like the added convenience and privacy of an individual telephone line? Any of our Business Offices will gladly arrange to make the change for you.

Plaids Outstanding in Fall Modes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

PLAIDS on autumn style program? We hope to tell you! Fact is, the college-faring and the school-going (from kindergarten to high school age) girl that fails to make a right smart showing of plaid in her fall wardrobe simply is not "in it" when it comes to swank in dress. There's no doubt about it, colorful, youthful practical plaids fit into the campus, the office and the great outdoor scheme of things simply perfect.

All sorts of plaids are on the autumn fabric list from high-tone dressy plaids of silk velvet and handsome wool weaves down to the most utilitarian, practical, washable types—the kind that go bicycling along dusty roads and then come out "fresh as a daisy" after each tubing.

Bicycling is a fad so important nowadays designers recognize they must create fashions tuned to the sport. The new sturdy washable plaids are proving most likable for outfits of this sort. The girl on the "bike" as shown in the group illustrated is fashionably and sensibly frocked in a dependable completely shrunken washable plaid that gives this rider the look of being keenly style-minded.

The schoolgirl centered in the picture is likewise alertly fashion-conscious in that she also selects plaid for her vogueish blouse, and it's safe to say she will be getting a lot of wear out of it besides enjoying that feeling of confidence it brings to be appropriately clad for the occasion.

Another way to subscribe to the plaid rage that is now featuring in every phase of fashion is to wear a true clan plaid skirt and neckerchief with your new fall sweater as shown to the right in the group. This most commendable outfit is sure to prove an inspiration to the schoolgirl. It was shown at a recent fall style clinic held in the Merchandise Mart in Chicago.

Viewing the new fall fabrics one becomes fully convinced that plaids as a fashion "must" are definitely here. It is interesting to note that the more classic plaids are labeled each with its clan name. Also the many smart ways to wear plaids makes them all the more intriguing.

In enrolling as a plaid enthusiast we suggest that you line your jacket to match your plaid blouse, or wear a plaid dress matched to the lining of your coat, or top a pleated plaid skirt with a bright velveteen jacket, or enliven your fur coat or your Beece coat with a stunning plaid lining. They are showing in the stores daring coats in forest green, radiant autumn browns, and the very new deep sapphire blue with bold plaid linings in giddy contrast.

Plaid velvet dresses to wear under fur coats is another outcome of the present craze for plaids. You can also find cunning jackets of plaid velveteen. Some are bolero versions with plaid belts to match.

If it is just a touch of plaid you favor, buy a dozen or so of the new plaid composition buttons and let them go marching down the front of your dark velveteen dress or coat. You can get all sorts of plaid accessories. There are ensembles of beret, bag and belt. There are belt and triangle-scarf sets to be had in plaid.

Style Sobriety Stressed for Chic Daytime Costume

At the height of the vogue for romantic fashions, mutinous murmurs are echoing from the ranks of style leaders who favor simple garments for wear before the sun goes down.

"Sobriety of the best quality" is the formula advanced by a leading French couturiere as the prime requisite of daytime chic.

"Wear tailored suits and little sweaters," she advises, "but have them fitted by a good tailor and made of the finest wool. See that each accessory is equally first grade, for one inappropriate gadget can spoil the entire costume."

WHIMS OF FASHION

Red, white and blue prints are smart for cocktail suits.

Fur stoles and fur tails are again making fashion history.

Carbon blue remains one of the most popular of this season's colors.

Hostess gowns of fur are a Paris prescription for cold country houses.

A light colored topcoat over a dark frock provides a striking costume.

House coats of gay flannels and quaintly flowered challis are on display.

Banana yellow is a sophisticated shade being used for youthful evening dresses.

IF YOU thought Deanna Durbin a remarkably talented youngster last year when you saw her in "Three Smart Girls," you will think she is nothing short of a baby genius when you see "One Hundred Men and a Girl." Her voice, always good, has developed so amazingly that she ranks with the best of screen prima donnas. Even more startling is the development of this quiet fourteen-year-old as an actress. She plays comedy, farce or tragedy with the deft assurance of a veteran. Supported by Stokowski, that most brilliant of conductors, no nervous qualms weaken her voice, and in scenes with Alice Brady, Adolph Menjou, and Mischa Auer, those persistent scene stealers, she more than holds her own.

RKO has already finished the screen version of "Stage Door" with Katherine Hepburn and Ginger Rogers in the leads. The dialogue, everyone says, simply sparkles, and although Hepburn and Rogers are at their very best in it, Andrea Leeds and Lucille Ball, who play small roles, draw a big share of the enthusiastic comment.

It looks as if all Hollywood will be trying to congregate on the Bing Crosby set soon, for Bee Lillie, the elegant Lady Peel no less, is going to play opposite him. If you missed Bee on a recent Vallee hour, you should shed one tear at least. She gave the sketch that she has done innumerable times — "Two dozen double damask dinner napkins, please," and it was even funnier than before.

Very few actors enjoy success in Hollywood for more than five years, but producers never find a newcomer who can handle Alan Hale roles. He has just signed to play Little John in the new version of "Robin Hood" with Errol Flynn. It is the same role he played 15 years ago when Douglas Fairbanks made the picture.

Maybe Eddie Cantor is awfully smart to switch his radio program from Sunday nights to Wednesday, because the Sunday night competition is going to be even more fierce than usual this winter. There will be Jack Benny, of course, Phil Baker, and Joe Penner, but in addition there will be two big screen favorites with new programs—Rosalind Russell and Tyrone Power. Robert Taylor had better hurry back from England if he doesn't want Tyrone to displace him as Matinee Idol Number One of the younger set.

Will to Succeed

EVERY morning, before you begin your work, hold in your mind the picture and register the vow of masterfulness. Let that one ideal remain in your mind all through the day. Think masterfulness, radiate masterfulness, do everything to a complete finish.

Do not allow yourself to dawdle, to waver in your decision, or permit yourself to do fool things, during the day. Use levelheadedness, good judgment in every act. Go about your work with the consciousness of your masterfulness, holding the ideal of your superiority, your efficiency, your ability to reach the heights of excellence.

Resolve every morning that you will make a red-letter day of that day, for if you are going to make your whole life a masterpiece each day must be a masterpiece.

"Paw's practicing . . . he's gonna hitch-hike to Florida this winter."

Hugh Bradley Says:

© New York Post.—WNU Service.

The Medwicks and Di Maggios Cross Swords

THIS all started when a customer with an Italian monicker took his pen in hand to say that probably he would have to look out for M. Finns in his spaghetti from now on. Nevertheless, he could not help it. He had to tell the world that Jersey Joe Medwick was a better ball player than Jolting Joe Di Maggio.

Since then things have been happening. Each hour new regiments of Jim Farley's finest limp into this office with new tons of letters dealing with the controversy. Irate Di Maggio fans keep buzzing the phone all day issuing challenges to the Medwick brethren. Holland tunnel and Washington bridge have become clogged with New Jersey neighbors bound for Manhattan and the Bronx so as to indulge in face-to-face combat with belittlers of their Joe.

So, in the interests of peace—as well as to give the Japs and Chinese some chance to attract popular attention with their own brawlings—this reporter undertook to do a Mr. Secretary Hull.

Personally, if he were choosing up sides and had the first two picks with pitchers excluded, he would take Charley Gehringer and Lo Gehrig ahead of the two Joes. But he did not offer this plan. Instead, he decided that if anything could cause the warring parties to compose their differences it would be the mature opinion of other big-time players.

So he invited various baseball celebrities to take down their hair and answer one question—"Who is the better player, Di Maggio or Medwick?" Their answers are appended herewith:

Gus Mancuso Lauds 'Jolting Joe's' Prowess

GUS MANCUSO — "Medwick is the better hitter, but Di Maggio hits the longer ball. Di Maggio is the better all-around ball player."

BILL TERRY—"Why can't we come up with a Di Maggio?"

BILL McKECHNIE—"If I were given my choice right now I'd take

"There's Radcliffe! Asleep at the switch!"

WNU Service

Di Maggio. Medwick is great, but Di Maggio is a wonder."

TOM WINSETT — "Everybody knows Di Maggio has a better arm. He's a different type of hitter, too—a smooth swinger who generates more power."

Even Connie Mack Speaks His Mind!

COOKIE LAVAGETTO—"Both of 'em can do everything. I'd say Di Maggio has a shade more power. As a National league player, however, I'd pick Medwick. But as an Italian I'll string along with the other Joe."

JOE CRONIN—"I haven't seen much of Medwick, but Di Maggio is by far the better fielder."

CONNIE MACK—"I don't see how any player, particularly one in the National league, can be compared to Di Maggio. He's wonderful, simply wonderful. I'd rank him with the greatest outfielders of all time."

GABBY HARTNETT — "They're both great hitters, but if I had to take my choice I wouldn't hesitate in picking Di Maggio."

Connie Mack

There you have it, gents—and ladies. The celebrities quoted here were picked at random. The majority of them favor Di Maggio. What is more, players from the opposition circuit have kicked over the traces of league loyalty to render him proper acclaim. Since Babe Ruth is the only other player to have had similar tribute paid to him in recent years, that should settle it.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:

THE Dodgers and the St. Louis clubs definitely will play night baseball next year. As usual the Dodgers will not be worth losing sleep over but it will provide the boys with a gag when the usual runners are left stranded. "Afraid to go home in the dark," you know. Bob Olin, who had Tommy Farr on the floor several times during their fight, is challenging all heavyweights within sight. Fritz Malsel, Jr., enters Western Maryland college this fall and the boys say he is due to be as good a third sacker as was his daddy when he starred for the Yankees and Orioles. Horton Smith is terribly tired, he says, and plans to take a long rest after the Belmont Open.

Carl Snavelly, Cornell football coach, is developing into a fine golfer. He scores consistently in the seventies. Friends say that Gil Dobie, slammed around by an auto last year, is far from a well man. Syracuse townsmen claim that Lou Little has a real find in Spasato, soph halfback, and that the kid will be a Columbia regular this fall.

Lou Little

Minnesota may have an even better football team this season than the Gopher elevens which have lost only one game in three years. Four good men are gone but the best frosh club ever to come out of the Minnesota prairies will plug those gaps, and ten sturdy lads, ineligible last fall, also are raring to go. Northwestern, with Don Heap back to lead the charge, will be dangerous but will lack reserves sufficient to repeat last fall's brilliant showing. Illinois is a dark horse with very little known about the Zuppke prospects. Chicago, which faces Princeton on its home field October 16, should be easy for the Tigers. Indiana, coming fast under Bo McMillan, should show improvement over 1936.

Charley Root leads the National league in control. The veteran Cub pitcher yields only one base on balls every six-and-a-half innings. Bernon Prentice, president of the Sea Bright Lawn Tennis and Cricket club, told it for the first time the other day. When the Brazilian Davis Cup team was here to play the United States a few years ago, the U. S. L. T. A. threw a dinner party and had the dining room appropriately decorated. At least they thought they had it appropriately decorated. Manuel Alonzo, widely traveled in South America, arrived early, glanced around the room and then rushed up to the chairman of the committee.

"Those are Chilean flags," he blurted out excitedly. "And Chile has just declared war on Brazil!"

Your Writer Picks an All-Star Team

All star major league team for 1937, as picked by Hugh Bradley for St. Louis Sporting News, which is taking a poll of baseball writers—Medwick, lf; Di Maggio, cf; Paul Waner, rf; Rolfe, 3b; Cronin, ss; Gehringer, 2b; Gehrig, 1b; Hartnett, c; Hubbell, Ruffing, p. . . A fan who professes to have no resentment concerning the gentleman but who has observed that Arthur Donovan referees nearly all the big money prize fights in New York asks, "Is it possible that the great sporting city of 8,000,000 inhabitants can develop only one referee capable of handling a major prizefight?" . . . I refer the question to Ballyhoo Bill Brown, the Red Baiter of the New York State Athletic commission. Personally, I think Arthur is a swell guy as well as a referee who always does his duty.

Cornell's frosh football team is overloaded with star material again this year. Bill Murphy, a Jersey youngster, is said to be tops but also keep an eye on Jack Bohrman. He's as hard as nails and can kick 'em a mile. . . Upper New York state papers are boosting Rabbit Maranville to succeed Burleigh Grimes as Dodgers manager. . . In Cincinnati they insist that Burt Shotton will succeed Charley Dressen, who will be taken into the Giants' organization. . . Minnesota football coach, Bernie Bierman, says that Wisconsin will have the most improved football team in the Big Ten this year.

Old Man Studles has sidelined Tom Wood, giant Princeton tackle who had been counted on to fill George Stoess' vacated post. If the Tigers could have teamed Wood with Charley Toll they would have had the largest tackle pair in the East, the combined weight of the two being a cozy 480 pounds. . . Watch Vito Ananis, soph back at Boston college. Tony Sarausky, who went to high school with him, tried to get the youngster into Fordham but there was a slip-up somewhere. . . Does anybody remember that, on July 29, three weeks or so before the event, this space said that Johnny Goodman would win the national amateur golf title?

Bulldog Mothers Kittens

For five years, Twig, a bull-terrier, and Katherine, just a cat of doubtful parentage, have been boon companions around the home of their owner, Mrs. Leo DeMarsh, of Glendale, Calif. Last week, Katharine became the mother of four little kittens, causing Twig to go on a hunger strike and begin to fret—a veterinary was called and diagnosed the trouble as "longing for a family of her own." Twig solved the problem by moving in on Katharine's family, starting to nurse and care for the little kittens. Katharine didn't think so much of this arrangement so now Twig has two of the kittens to feed and the mother cat nurses the two others. Photo shows the four kittens nursing Twig, the bull-terrier, while Katharine, the mother cat, looks on.

YO, FANNY!! WILL YOU FIND ME SOME CLEAN UNDERWEAR?

JUST A MINUTE, DEAR

HECK! NO USE WAITING FOR HER.

I THOUGHT I ASKED YOU TO BRING ME A SHIRT AND SHORTS--

I'M LOOKING FOR THEM, DEAR

HUH? DO YOU EXPECT THEM TO COME UP THE STREET?

YES-- I THINK I SEE THE LAUNDRY MAN, NOW

Along the Concrete

GOSH--IT'S FUNNY HOW HUNGRY YOU GET WHEN YOU'RE OUT DRIVIN'!

MY LANDS! IT SEEMS WE DO MORE EATING THAN WE DO DRIVING--

OH, MA-- C'N I HAVE ANOTHER SANDWICH?

JOE JAY

Such is Life

ARE YOU A HITCHHIKER?

NOT ANY MORE, SON-- IT'S AGIN THE LAW

BESIDES, TH' LAST CAR I THUMBED TURNED OUT TO BE A POLICE CAR--

"Is that old chap always so glum as now?"

"By no means. He laughs enough twice a year, spring and fall, when the women's hats come in."

Training

The bright young thing came into the room and smiled at her mother. "Mother," she said, "I must have some money for a new dress. Will you ask daddy for it?"

"Ask him yourself, dear," was mother's reply. "You are getting married in a month's time and you must have some practice."—London Answers Magazine.

A New Way

At the orchestral concert. Mother (to small daughter who is tying a knot in the corner of her tiny handkerchief)—What are you doing that for, darling?

Daughter—Oh, mummie, I do want to remember that pretty tune. —Chicago Daily News.

Pie for Breakfast

A traveling salesman stopped at a small Vermont hotel for breakfast. The waitress asked him what he'd like for his breakfast. "Have you cooked breakfast foods?" he inquired.

"Yes, indeed."
"What kinds have you?"
"Open-face, criss-cross and kivered—all apple."

Suspense

"Your boy friend is the studious type, isn't he?"
"Well, I keep him thinking."

AGAINST THE WALL

"This awful cost of high living is an unmixed curse."
"Oh, I don't know. It's the only thing that keeps a lot of poor simps from getting married."

WHEW!

Landlady—Hercules had wonderful strength, of course, but—
Boarder—But he would have been outclassed by this butter and coffee if he had tackled them.

Higher and Higher

"What if I have loved another, dear? Don't you know it has only prepared me for the greater, higher love I have for you?"
"That's all right; but how do I know that the love you have for me isn't preparing you for a greater, higher love for someone else?"—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Too Bad

"Doesn't that orchestra deafen you?"
"Unfortunately, no!"—Exchange.

Why Men Leave Home

Mr. Newedd—What is the matter, dear?

Mrs. Newedd—I can't understand it. The recipe said to bring it to a boil on a quick fire and then beat it for 10 minutes. And when I came back it was burnt to a crisp.

Valued Seclusion

"Do you enjoy your magnificent new library?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Cumrox, "for a while I didn't get much good out of it. But you don't know what a nice quiet place it is to try out the latest records on the phonograph."
