OPEN NATION-WIDE UNEMPLOYMENT CENSUS NOV. 16

Beginning November 16, a nation-wide census of all unemployed persons will be taken. This census which was authorized by congress during its last session, is under the direction of John D. Biggers and will be conducted through the post office department.

It is to be a voluntary census, and messages from both the president of the United States and Mr. Biggers urge the people to cooperate in making the returns of the census as accurate and authoritative as is possible.

On November 16, unemployment report cards will be delivered to every family in the country thru the post office. There will be a card for each member of the family not affected by child labor laws etc. These cards must be returned to the post office on or before November 20.

Information given on the cards will be considered as confidential and all questions on the card should be answered correctly.

The local postmasters now have the report cards ready for release on the designated day and all persons who have worked for pay, who are able to work and still want work, all persons who formerly had their own business, farm, or professional practice, and no longer work at it, who are able to work and want work, all persons now looking for their first jobs, and all persons who are partly employed, able to do more work, and want more work.

Those who should not register in the census are those who are working full time for wages or commissions, or persons who devote full time to their own business, etc.

If you are now working but looking for another job, do not register.

Persons on strike, unless actively looking for other work should not register, and those temporarily sick or disabled but who have a full time job to return to should not register.

Administrative employees of WPA, NYA, CCC or other agencies conducting emergency work projects should not register.

BOWLING

By R. O. Hecht

Last Sunday afternoon in a match game between the high five men of each of the two Lansing Bowling Leagues, it was finally decided which league is to be called the "Major" and which is to be called the "Minor" league. The contest went to League No. 1 (Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday) by a margin of 110 pins. League No. 1 shot 2768 while No. 2 came in with 2658. The line ups with their respective scores were as follows: League No. 1 — W. Weaver 552, E. Rauguth 516, Ben Vierk 513, R. Schultz 602, and Melvin Vierk 585. League No. 2 — R. Blank 592, Paul Hecht 497, Pete Busch 500, E. Finnegan 496 and Carl Hecht 573.

Now, then, the results in the "Major" League last week were as follows: Knot-holes are tumbling a bit here of late and again lost two of their games to Dockwellers. Knot-holes still hold first place by one game with the Auto Inn and Dockwellers tie for second place, one game behind the leaders. State Line came through again to defeat Mikos twice. Auto Inn (the old Brickmakers team) stepped right up and took all three from the fast stepping Kraay Brothers. I. Lange was a great help to the Auto Inn when he shot a 244 taking high individual game honors for the season in League No. 1. The Lions roared into the Legion and came out victorious having won all three games. The Federal Savings and Loan men downed Ridge Road Gardens twice to stay ahead of the Legion boys who are at the present in the basement. Paul Sass shot high series last week with a 616 total.

Turning to the "Minor" League we find that things are pretty hot up around first place. The league leading Padjen men lost a little of their luck when one of their players went "falsch" and rolled average. This enabled Pannys Hopman-cleaners to take one game out of the three. Lansing Pharmacy moved into second place again when they took all three from Lansing Motors. Meeters dropped two to Slagers and tumbled into third place. The two barbers tangled shears and Gid came out on top having won two to Louies one. Padjen now holds first place with 20 wins and 7 defeats. Lansing Pharmacy has 19 wins and 8 defeats while Meeters in third place have 18 wins and 9 defeats.

The young couple will establish their new home at 18284 Burnham avenue.

R. R. ROTTIER TO TAKE ARMY TEST

Rottier, a junior at Western State Teachers College, is one of 28 Michigan applicants who have qualified for competitive examinations for appointment to the United States Military and Naval academies according to the report of Senator Prentiss M. Brown. Examinations will be held Nov. 6 and Brown will base his appointments on the candidates' standings. Rottier is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. John Rotier, Lansing. He has a brother, John living in Kalamazoo. He has been taking an engineering course at WSTC and is a member of the Phi Sigma Rho fraternity. Rottier will try for the military Academy.

MINOR ACCIDENT HERE SATURDAY

No one was seriously injured in a rather peculiar accident which happened here last Saturday. The accident happened Saturday evening about 7 o'clock a few hundred feet east of Burnham avenue on Ridge Road.

Clyde Jones, of Dyer, Ind., driving east on Ridge Road in a Pontiac sedan collided head-on into Fritz Kraegel driving a Bonna truck west on Ridge Road. The collision was almost in the middle of the road. Young Kraegel said he had intended turning in at the filling station on the corner and did not see the Jones car coming. Kraegel had a large bump on his head as a result of the mishap, and both machines were considerably damaged.

BEET HARVESTING MACHINE SEEN HERE

A new Scott Viner beet harvesting machine, which is claimed to be greatly improved over the machine seen here last year is being demonstrated on the farm of John Eenigenburg just south of the village all this week, and will probably be there part of next week.

It is claimed that the new machine will harvest from three to five acres of beets per day.

Jake Swieringa will show the machine at work to those interested in it.

TO FILE PETITION FOR BUS LINE LAST OF WEEK

In a conversation with Mr. Haslet, attorney for the Safeway Bus company this week a representative of this paper was informed that the hearing before the Commerce Commission listed for this week did not concern the proposed route through Lansing and Calumet City, but merely the change of terminal address in the city of Chicago.

The company has used a terminal on south Wabash avenue, but now has a new one on Radolph street.

The petition for the new line through Lansing is to be filed with the commission either the latter part of this week or the first of next and it will probably be three weeks before the matter comes up for hearing. The date may be announced next week.

Mr. Winterhoff, as chairman of the Lions club is handling the gathering of evidence to be presented to the commission at the hearing as to why Lansing should have this line. It is important that this evidence be as impressive as possible so all active organizations in the village have been or will be asked to pass resolutions in favor of the proposed bus line.

The line would provide direct transportation into the loop of Chicago from Lansing through Calumet City without transfer and at a nominal cost.

120 CHILDREN FROM LANSING TO SEE GAME SATUR.

Busses to take the group of Lansing youngsters to the Chicago vs. Beloit football game in Chicago Saturday will be at the Lansing Motors corner, Ridge Road and Ada street Saturday morning at 11 o'clock it was announced by Gerald Wright, who is in charge of the expedition. The busses will leave promptly at 11:30.

More than 120 Lansing school children have signified their intentions of taking advantage of the opportunity to see a big time college football game, provided by the Calumet Memorial Park System. Any school child may go, according to Mr. Wright. The admission to the game is taken care of by the Park System, but the children are asked to pay 25 cents to take care of the transportation charges. Safeway busses are to be used.

Gerald Wright, supervisor of the Federal Recreation Project now operating at the Calumet Memorial Park is in charge of the trip, but there will be an adult to take care of each fifteen youngsters.

Parochial as well as public school children may make the trip, and those who have forgotten to take their quarter to their teacher may leave it with Adele Schultz at the Lansing Motors office anytime before the busses leave Saturday morning at 11:30.

The coach advises the children to carry a light lunch. In fact Mr. Wright said he was sure a pocket full of mother's home made cookies would add a lot to the game.

This is the second trip to a big football game which the F.R.A. through the Calumet Memorial Park System, has provided for the youngsters of the region. The whole group will include students of Thornton Fractional and Calumet City schools as well as Lansing and other regional communities.

Other trips are being planned that will include basket ball games, rodeo, circuses, baseball games, Museums, and other interesting paces and events, if the present endeavor proves successful.

ARMISTICE DAY

LEGION OF YESTERDAY
James Neill Northe

We are the shadow-men of yesterday,
Caked in mud and lying in our graves;
Broken and torn and rotted well these years,
We, the unsung heroes and the knaves.
Step aside to let us limp our way,
Hear our voices tuned to bullets' whine,
Fling a silent jest across the years—
These are your echoes—the same heady wine
To call forth men and boys—to crush their lives.
The same draught to turn your smiles to fears;
We are the shadow-men of yesterday,
Who watch your wars—laugh—and catch your tears;
Somewhere there must be a song to sing
Far grander than that of bullets' sting
Sometime there must come a day's release
When we shall find the door of peace.

LESSON FOR ARMISTICE DAY

The greatest effort which the American people ever made ended with the original Armistice on November 11, 1918. Much can be learned from the study of the results of that effort, and the methods by which it was accomplished.

The job which the American people did, of placing 2,000,000 men in the war torn countries, of equipping them and placing them in action against the enemy, and of performing the enormous task of forcing back great armies, astonished the world. It had not been thought that such a thing could be done. There were of course, disappointments, due largely to the lack of preparation for any such stupendous effort. Considering all the tremendous obstacles, a mighty job was well done.

It was probably the biggest stroke of work ever performed by the American people in such a short time. We do well to ask how it was that the job was so well done.

The reason was that the American people took hold and toiled unitedly for the common purpose. They were probably never so well united on a great issue before. Party contentions, the difference of social classes, were forgotten.

Now if we could only have the spirit of united effort to achieve the objectives we should now have in view, what mighty things our people could accomplish. They could again astonish the world. We have now a war to carry on against poverty, unemployment, business unsettlement, ignorance, crime, vice disease, and the other evils and wrongs of society. Let us look back to the spirit that animated the nation with one heart and soul in 1918, and ask if we cannot get together, and fight these new enemies with some such unity.

WONDERING

Mr. Roosevelt's announcement of a special session of Congress, to convene November 15, cannot be headlined as a surprise. As this column pointed out some time ago, men in touch with the White House were convinced that the President had determined on a special session months ago, and the only question was the precise date.

Asserted reason for the session is new farm aid legislation, with Federal hours and wage laws as runnersup in importance. But in the view of some commentators, the real purpose of the special session has not been officially announced.

Those who follow politics have noticed a rather remarkable change in Mr. Roosevelt's more recent speeches and public announcements. He has been much less critical than in the past of the groups which oppose his administration's aims and methods. On his swing around the country, most of his major and minor talks were comparatively mild in tone and wording. It has been widely said by responsible newspaper men, that the speech he had originally planned to deliver at Bonneville was a slashing attack on the opposition—and that he changed his mind, once he got away from the always stultifying air of Washington, and substituted the calm and relatively dispassionate speech he actually delivered.

As a consequence, to use the words of Paul Mallon, there is a strong feeling that "all this maneuvering of the past few weeks is a clever and effective screen for a rather complete unannounced reformation of the New Deal from within".

Mr. Mallon cites a "good friend of the White House" as authority for the statement that the President has: 1. Definitely renounced the plan of heavy government spending to bolster business and prices; feels that government spending must be reduced and the budget balanced, and that price rises must be halted. 2. Abandoned the Supreme Court reorganization measure. 3. Come to the belief that the government can do more for the country by returning to two of the original objectives of his administration—farm aid, and control of wages and hours. 4. Decided to center attention on international affairs (his widely-praised Chicago speech marked the send-off here) to "cover removal of emphasis from old policies which have failed".

If all this is true, and there is certainly abundant evidence to justify the guess that it is at least partly true, the New Deal is not only undergoing a reformation but a revolution. This does not mean that the president has eliminated all the more "radical" phases of his past program—he still believes in big-scale government hydro-electric developments, a more strongly centralized government and increased power for the executive. It does mean that some of the theories which caused a major split within his own party, to say nothing of intensifying the opposition of the other party, may have been dropped overboard. At any rate, the theories detailed by Mr. Mallon, and held by other experts in the exciting political field, are worth thinking about.

EXTRA! EXTRA!

(By O. Wulfling)

We are the shadow legion
We stand in silence behind the dawn
And watch your every thought—
We hear, in silence, your every word
And hold the peace we bought
Within our hands—and weep no tears.
We stand across the years and know
That food and brawn could never buy
A freedom striven for so long ago.
Strew flowers and laurel leaves today,
Chant prayers for those of us who died,
And as you hallow us in warrior's graves
Prepare to meet a daughter of Mars . . . a bride
We are the shadow legion who stand
Silent among you across the land.

ARMISTICE

We come again to 'Armistice Day'. Nineteen years ago today the world was declared 'safe for democracy' and there are row upon row of little white crosses in France to prove that it was an ideal for which men would give their lives, for which mothers would silently let their hearts break. The world worshipped the great god 'Mars' and laid upon his altar the flower of her manhood, until the hulking beast of hate appeared.

Nineteen years and new young faces, boys with the hopes and ambitions of youth, rich promise for better, fuller, living, but far on the horizon can be heard the rumble of cannon, the shriek of the bomb and shell as the war god awakens with pains of hunger and prepares for a feast.

Armistice Day, nineteen years and the cry, "To Arms, To Arms To Arms" again is sounding.

But, we do not have to worship the great god, Mars, there still can be heard the voice of a creed born nineteen hundred years ago, 'good will to man'.

Reincarnation

Years sift into eternity,
Each one a grain of shifting sand,
Life keeps its rendezvous with death—
We struggle briefly 'cross the strand.

Yet during this one paltry hour
Of life, it seems I've lived before—
Have gazed at the eternal Sphinx
While being born of Egypt's lore.

In journeys to an alien land
Strange landscapes, mountains,
hills, and seas
Rejuvenate aged memory,
That's lived throughout the centuries.

A dulcet vibrant melody
Comes to my ears from out the night,
Bringing, with its ageless wings,
Old visions—reborn to my sight.

As life rides down the sweeping tide,
A bubble blown of hope and pain,
Dead fires rekindled light the port—
I've lived before,
I shall again!

As the one-man staff of a small country newspaper, Joe E. Brown is everything from the managing editor to the copy boy, and the various jams he gets into in the course of the story make hilarious entertainment, winding up with a thrilling air duel between the star and a band of flying smugglers armed with machine guns. Guy Kibbee and Florence Rice head the supporting cast of the picture.

Next Sunday the Paramount screen attraction will be "Saturday's Heroes" with Marian Marsh, and on stage another array of vaudeville stars, Monday the Paramount opens with "100 Men And A Girl" starring Deanna Durbin and featuring Adolphe Menjou and Mischa Auer.

"Don't worry, you'll get to the party all right."

Brooke ignored his gruffness. "Of course I want to get to the party. Then I shan't feel guilty that I dragged you away from the fun and congratulations. Leave me at Lookout House. I must change these soaked sandals before I join the festivities. Here we are."

From the top of the steps she looked down at Field who was looking up at her.

"I'm sorry, Jerry," she whispered softly, before she entered the house and closed the door behind her.

"He doesn't really love me, he's a spoiled boy who wants what he can't have," she reassured herself, as in her boudoir she changed her wet sandals.

She readjusted the rhinestone and emerald clip on her white frock, sprayed perfume on her hair, powdered her nose, accented her lips. She shook her head at the looking-glass girl.

"Stalling, aren't you, Brooke Reyburn? You dread to face Mark Trent with that will you've kept back for two days, don't you? Get going!"

She crossed to the desk, found the key where she had hidden it. "Zero hour," she said aloud, and unlocked the drawer in which she had placed the will.

She looked down.

The drawer was empty.

CHAPTER XIV

People coming, but not going; music never stopping. It was that kind of a party.

To the accompaniment of the hum of voices, the stimulating beat and throb of the orchestra, the distant faint tinkle of silver and glass, Sam Reyburn made slow progress through the gay, colorful crowd on the lower floor of the Other House grinning at girls in lovely evening frocks who cooed over him; frowning at men who tried to detain him.

From where he stood on the lowest step of the circular stairway, Mark Trent watched him. "All this praise is heady stuff for a boy," he thought, and then reminded himself that Sam wasn't a boy. Why wasn't Brooke with him to share the honors? She had been the first to leave the hall, the man in charge of the parked cars had told him. Where was Jerry Field? He hadn't appeared either.

A curious premonition turned him cold. Of course Brooke hadn't meant it when in answer to his sarcastic suggestion she had said she would end Field's torment. Hadn't she? There had been infinite determination in her crisp retort:

"I will. Tonight."

"Seen Brooke, Mark?" Sam Reyburn inquired as he approached. "I want her to be the first to know that I'm to get a contract; that I have an option in my pocket and a check."

Mark Trent laid his hand affectionately on his shoulder.

"Great stuff, Sam, great stuff. I was sure that the New York producer was hooked when he spoke to me."

Sam grinned. "Offered you the lead in a Broadway production, didn't he? He's a publicity hound. Think of the headlines:

"Leading Insurance Executive Leaves Lucrative Business for the Stage," they'll read. Will you do it?"

"What do you think? How's the party going, Mrs. Gregory?"

Mark Trent smiled at the woman whose blazing tiara on her marcelled white hair, and plastron of diamonds on her purple velvet gown dimmed what sparkle life had left in her tired eyes. She answered crisply:

"Listen to the hubbub and you won't ask the question. Your party has brought out tails and white ties, Mark, that's a triumph in itself. I always know what guests think of my parties by the way they dress for them." She patted Sam's sleeve.

"My boy, your play is the sweetest, loveliest, most heart-wringing thing I've seen on the stage for years. Where's your sister? I want to tell her what I think of it."

"That's what Mark and I were wondering. She left the hall before the rest of us; she told me before the first curtain was rung up that she would dash home to change for the party."

Mrs. Gregory's face grew a shade less colorful. "I don't like her not being here, I don't like it. I've been uneasy about that girl every moment since she testified at the inquest about the strange man who passed through her room the night of the filling station hold-up. The man hasn't been caught. She knows too much. They may try to put her out of the way."

The strong lenses in Sam's horn-rimmed spectacles magnified the horror in his eyes.

"What an awful suggestion, Mrs. Gregory! What a gosh-awful thought!"

It was an awful thought, but improbable, most improbable, Mark Trent assured himself. With difficulty he cleared his voice of hoarseness before he accused:

"You've been reading mystery stories, Empress, confess now, haven't you? Just the same, we'll start on Brooke's trail at once. What is it, Kowa?"

He spoke sharply to the servant who had wormed his way through the crowd of dancers who overflowed from the library to the hall.

"Much obliged. Madame Gregory's car here. Chauffeur say to tell her storm bad, very bad. She better get home. He know she not like to be out in storm."

"Tell him to wait. I won't go till I know where Brooke is," Mrs. Gregory snapped.

"Did you see Miss Reyburn come in, Kowa?" Mark Trent inquired. Of course, the suggestion that she was in danger was absurd, but it was getting under his skin.

The Jap's slanting eyes narrowed to mere slits. He put his lips close to Mark Trent's ear and whispered:

"Miss Reyburn tell Taku she and Mr. Field go to marry, thank you. She carry suitcase, sir."

"What!"

Had he shouted the word? Mark's eyes flashed from Mrs. Gregory to Sam Reyburn. Both were regarding him anxiously, but apparently neither had caught the content of Kowa's whisper.

"Has anything happened to Brooke?" Mrs. Gregory's lips twitched, tears filled her eyes. Sam caught Trent's arm.

"What did Kowa say? What did he say?"

Mark Trent steadied his mind. He must reply to their questions. What should he say? He couldn't blurt out the truth here. Perhaps Brooke had flung that remark at Taku for dramatic effect. But the suitcase—

"Mark! Mark! Why don't you answer?"

He looked down into Mrs. Gregory's eyes, terrified now.

"Brooke is perfectly safe. She—There's Field! Ask him where she is. He saw her last. Go get him, Sam! Go get him!"

"No need, he's coming as fast as he can push through the dancers, and Jed Stewart is at his heels. They are white as sheets. What's all the mystery? The air is full of it. My skin's turning to gooseflesh. For Pete's sake, where's Brooke, Jerry?"

Jerry Field was breathless from the effort of shaking off congratulatory hands which had tried to detain him.

"Changing her sandals at Lookout House. I've got to speak to you, Trent! Quick!"

Relief stopped the thumping of Mark Trent's heart. Had Brooke married Field, would he be here? He would not. He turned to Kowa still standing beside him and asked in a voice he had difficulty in keeping steady:

"Is anyone in the print room?" The Jap disappeared and returned with incredible speed.

"No person there, sir." Mark spoke in a low tone to Jerry Field:

"Slip into the room back of the stairs. Sam, tell the musicians to play something loud and gay; then join us. Now that we know Brooke is safe, Mrs. Gregory—"

"Mrs. Gregory is coming with us," Jed Stewart interrupted.

Even with the door of the room closed, the beat and rhythm of the music outside set the air within vibrating. A cheery fire crackled on the hearth. Incredibly long-stemmed Templar roses in a tall vase made a splash of gorgeous crimson against the neutral tinted walls hung with Japanese prints, scented the air with their spicy fragrance. Mrs. Gregory resisted the seductive depth of a large chair and sat erect on the edge.

"What's happened? What's happened?" she demanded testily.

"Wait a minute. Thought I heard something." Field pulled aside the hangings at the window and peered out; Jed Stewart on his toes looked over his shoulder. "Yep, there they go. Police are no respecters of supper parties."

Jerry Field drew the hangings close and returned to the mantel. The lighter he held to his cigarette was not quite steady. "Now, folks, listen to my bedtime story."

For an instant there was no sound in the still room save the purr of the fire and the tap of a snowy vine against a window. Then it seemed to Mark Trent that the woman in the deep chair, Sam Reyburn with his elbow resting on one corner of the low bookshelves, Jed Stewart backed against the door as if to barricade it, stopped breathing as Field told how Brooke had commandeered his roadster and himself to take her across the causeway, of the reason she had given for her going, of her suspicion that the man she called the Bath Crystal Bandit might be serving as waiter at the party because of interest in the jewels of one of the guests.

"Sorry to Report You've Lost Your Chauffeur, Mrs. Gregory."

Mrs. Gregory instinctively put one hand to her tiara and one of the blazing plastron at her breast.

"I suppose you mean mine. When did they intend to take them?" she quavered.

Mark Trent crossed the room. He sat on the arm of her chair and put his hand on her shoulder.

"Steady, Empress, they can't get them now. Go on, Field. Then you and Brooke are not married?"

"Married! No such luck. Didn't I make that clear? Brooke told that yarn to avert suspicion from our get-away. Do you think I'd be here if we were married?" There was a glint of steel in his eyes as they met Mark Trent's.

"Where was I—oh yes. We made headquarters in record time. Brooke told her story. Your kitchen, Trent, was the scene of the neatest, quickest clean-up in the history of crime in this state, I'll bet. No, don't go. Inspector Harrison sent special instructions to you to keep things moving here so that the news of the arrests wouldn't get out until he had the men safely in jail. Sorry to report that you've lost your chauffeur, Mrs. Gregory."

"Dominique! Not Dominique? He's been with me for years. Why have I lost him?"

"He's been taken along for questioning. The inspector didn't have time to go into it here. The Jacques at Lookout House also are being personally conducted to headquarters. Quite a party, if you ask me. I didn't hear much, but your man Dominique, Mrs. Gregory, was to have engine trouble on the way home. While he tinkered, you were to be relieved of your jewels."

Anne Gregory's face was gray; it dropped into sagging lines, her mouth quivered childishly. Suddenly she was an old defeated woman.

"Isn't there anyone in the world I can trust?" she whimpered.

Mark Trent tightened his arm about her shoulders.

"Of course there's someone you can trust, you have Brooke and Sam, Jed and me, and—"

"Don't forget me," Jerry Field interrupted. "Now, who's come?" he queried.

The low quick knocking at the door was repeated. Jed Stewart opened it cautiously and let in a drift of dance music and Lucette.

Her lips were startlingly red in contrast to the whiteness of her face. The rhinestone straps which held up what there was of the back of the bodice of her pale blue frock sent out a million or two iridescent sparks. She caught the lapel of Mark Trent's coat as he took a quick step toward her.

"They're whispering outside that Brooke and Jerry Field have eloped. It isn't so, is it? Brooke wouldn't—"

Mark Trent turned her by the shoulders that she might see Jerry Field standing by the mantel. He saw the look in the girl's eyes, saw something in the man's spring up to meet it. He felt the quiver that ran through her body, felt the effort she made to overcome it as she said flippantly:

"News flash! Eloping bridegroom returns without lovely bride. Where's Brooke, Jerry?"

"Changing her wet sandals at Lookout House."

"Wet sandals! Where has she been?"

"She'll be here in a minute and tell you herself, Lucette. Better go back to the party," Mark Trent suggested. "The New York producer and the Boston manager are still here, aren't they? We're depending on you to see that they have the time of their lives."

"Boy, when Brooke didn't appear, I forgot those bozos, forgot that we'd had a play." With his hand on the knob of the door, Sam stopped. "Come along, Lucette."

Lucette caught Field's arm.

"Come with us, Jerry, and stop the rumor that you and Brooke have eloped; also we'll let people tell us what hits we were in 'Islands Arise.'"

"Suppose we go back to the party," Mark Trent suggested, and offered his arm to Mrs. Gregory.

As Mark Trent stepped back that Mrs. Gregory might precede him into the hall, Jed Stewart caught his arm.

"Just a minute, fella!" He lowered his voice. "The inspector wants us to wait up until he gets here, no matter if he doesn't come till daylight."

Mark nodded assent. The throb of a harp, the singing of the violins, the quaver of the horns, the brooding of the oboe were muted to a caressing minor, heart-breakingly sweet, as he piloted Mrs. Gregory to a throne-like chair in the hall. He left her and went in search of the New York producer. It required considerable finesse to evade clamorous friends. Even as he acknowledged praise of his acting, congratulations on the party, he was thinking what a queer, aching, vivid thing love was, with its ecstasy, its inevitable misunderstandings, its quarrels, and he wondered why he bruised his heart against Brooke's dislike, wondered if she would ever forgive him for that kiss. At least he—

"Mark! Mark!"

Before he had a chance to evade her, Daphne Field flung a bare arm about his neck.

"Dance with me, please! Mark! Mark! You must love me!" The girl's voice caught in a sob as she pressed against him.

Too annoyed to answer, he put his arm about her to guide her out of the room. As he turned he saw Brooke Reyburn standing directly behind her. There was a curious light in her eyes, a mocking smile on her lips.

Even as Brooke smiled and accepted congratulations on the success of her brother's play, did her best to entertain the New York producer who attached himself to her from the moment Sam presented him she was asking herself impatiently:

"Will the party never end? Who stole that paper from my desk? Can I make Mark Trent understand why I held back? If it is lost, will he ever forgive me?"

But all parties end. The last of the guests, with Mrs. Gregory carefully tucked into their limousine, drove off in a flood of moonlight which transformed the world into an enchanted land of dazzling purity. The producer and manager left in a powerful car after hearty handshakes with Sam and a backward look at Brooke as she stood between her brother and Mark Trent in the hall. Except for the Reyburns, the Fields were the last to go.

She drew an unsteady breath of relief when the front door had shut out the brother and sister. They were outsiders in the present situation. She couldn't have told her story before them, and she must tell it quickly; that will must be found. She wanted Lucette and Sam to hear what she had to tell Mark Trent and Jed Stewart; the sooner they knew of the change in her fortune, the better.

Mark Trent linked his arm in Sam's.

"Don't wig-wag the let's-go signal at the girls, maestro. Jed and I can't let you off yet. Come into the library. Half the fun of a party is talking it over. I told Kowa to bring in some eats. I don't believe you Reyburns ate a mouthful of supper; you were too busy receiving congratulations. I'm starving myself."

Sam grinned. "Now that you call the matter to my attention, I could toy with a little food. Come on, Brooke."

Lucette was curled up against the pillows in a corner of the library couch hugging her knees, when they entered. Stewart was backed up to the mantel. The girl's eyes were brilliant, her cheeks were pink, the voice in which she greeted them was bumpy from excitement:

"Come in, folks, and hear Jed tell me how good I was. He predicts that I would be an overnight sensation on Broadway."

"Snap out of that idea and snap out of it quick."

"Don't growl. Master Reyburn; he has been handing bouquets to the play too. I done you wrong, Sammy, when I crabbled about the last minute changes you made in the script; they were the high lights. Where's Jerry?"

Mark Trent answered Lucette's question.

"He and Daphne have gone home. You put it all over the other women in the cast of 'Islands Arise,' Lucette."

"She was a knockout and so was the 'leading woman,'" Sam agreed, "but, if you want to know who had the New York producer eating out of her hand, it was our little sister Brooke. After she arrived—trust a Reyburn to realize the dramatic value of a late entrance—I couldn't pry him away from her; lucky I got my option before she appeared. What were you saying to him, Brooke?"

Favorite Recipe of the Week

What to Do With Succotash
SUCCOTASH is a combination of cream style corn and lima beans. It is an American dish, having come to us from the Indians of this country, and its popularity has lasted through the years. Today it is possible to buy it in the canned form, and while it is good served hot with salt, pepper and butter, as was the custom years ago, it is equally good, and many times more appealing, if made into different dishes.

Succotash Chowder.

- 3 slices bacon
- 2 onions
- 2 potatoes
- 3 carrots
- 1 No. 2 can succotash
- Salt and pepper
- 2 cups medium white sauce
- Chopped parsley

Cut the bacon into small pieces and fry until crisp. Chop the onion, dice the potatoes and carrots and add to the bacon fat, and fry until the onion is a light brown. Add the succotash and about a cupful of water. Cover the pan and simmer until the potatoes and carrots are tender. Season with salt and pepper. Meantime, make the medium white sauce and add it to the cooked vegetable mixture. Allow the mixture to heat through thoroughly to blend the flavors. Serve hot with a sprinkling of chopped parsley over the top. This is hearty. If you prefer a thinner chowder, add extra milk.

Serve the chowder with toasted hard rolls, and finish the meal with a salad made from a can of mixed salad fruits combined with lettuce and French dressing.

Restraint Will Cheer Those in Mourning

DEAR Mrs. Post: I am in mourning and many people have called on me in the past few weeks. Always they talked about my dear departed husband and I live through the torments of having to face the hard realities of the future alone. Today a friend came to see me and not once during the whole time did she mention my trouble. She spoke of the things that had been happening in the outside world with which she knew I must have grown out of touch, and when she left I felt very much cheered. This seems a good point to make in your column for the benefit of those who would co-operate in making the world a more comfortable place for those in real sorrow. I feel sure that most people think they should talk about the departed one when paying such a visit.

Answer: I am very glad indeed to make the point you suggest, although it seems almost unbelievable that anyone could be so insensitive as to speak to people about their really great sorrow further than to reply to whatever they themselves may say. Even they who do talk about the one they have lost would be more greatly comforted by a person who listens with sympathy and perhaps says something appreciative about the one who has died, but it almost always causes pain to be asked questions or to have the subject pursued by the visitor.

Seat Hog Problem

DO YOU think it fair that the girls coming early to a school meeting keep best seats next to themselves for their particular friends who come in later? We feel that those who come first have a right to these best seats and we wish you would express your opinion before we bring the matter up for discussion at the next meeting.

Answer: This is one of the great abuses found in all assembly rooms where the audience is not given reserved seats. For a fairly large group to keep one extra seat is perhaps not out of the way, but to send someone on ahead, as is commonly done, who spreads a coat out in each direction for six or eight who come at their leisure is an evidence of extreme lack of appreciation of the rights of others. We can all understand that people in one group like to sit together, since this is only natural. But either they should all come together and then take best available seats or else they should be satisfied with seats at the side or in the back. In short, they should keep seats that are not especially desirable.

Cutting-In at Dance

SOME time ago I was the guest of a girl at a big dance at which I was a total stranger. Stags cut in on us frequently and I stood out most of the evening. Could I have cut in on other girls whom I had not met?

Answer: What your friend should have done would have been to take you up to some of the girls first before you and she went on dancing. Then the next time she was cut in on you could have cut in on any of these girls to whom she had introduced you. To leave you not knowing a person in the room was showing very little social tact on her part.

Teacher on Telephone.

DEAR Mrs. Post: When a teacher announces herself on the telephone, to a student I mean, what is the proper form?

Answer: "This is Miss Green" or "This is Mr. Blakely."

AROUND the HOUSE

Serving Omelets.—Omelets should be placed on hot platters to keep them from falling.

Scaling Fish.—Fish may be scaled easily by first dipping them into boiling water for a minute.

A Darning Ball.—A discarded electric light bulb makes a good darning ball.

Inexpensive Stew.—Chop two onions and a large carrot finely, and cut a pound of neck lamb into small pieces. Put into a saucepan with one cup macaroni broken into small lengths, cover with warm water and season. Let it simmer gently for one and a half hours.

Shoes Must Have Air.—Do not keep your shoes in the boxes in which they were delivered. Shoes require air to preserve them and they should never be kept in an air-tight box. Keep them in a shoe bag.

Whipping of Cream.—If whipped cream will not stand up, it is often due to the fact that the cream is not sufficiently chilled. It is important, too, to have a heavy cream of the right butter fat (20 to 30 per cent) and 12 to 24 hours old. The cream must be cold, and is best beaten in a cold container.

Save Table Surface.—If you will place a folded cloth under a dish which contains foods to be beaten you'll find the table surface will be saved many marks and the dish will be kept steady.

Removing Blueing Spots.—Blueing spots on white clothing can be removed by boiling in clear water.

Ox-Tail Pie.—Wash ox tail in salted water and joint; put into pan, cover with water, and simmer until almost cooked. Line bottom and sides of pie dish with slices of raw potato sprinkled with pepper and salt. Cover with strips of bacon, then place ox tail in center and pour in stock; season and cover with more slices of potato. Cover with pastry and bake in a quick oven.

Howland Island

Howland island is a treeless sandpit, about two miles long and 1,800 miles southwest of Honolulu. It was uninhabited until January, 1935, when the United States Department of Commerce, in anticipation of air routes, began to colonize it, together with Baker and Jarvis islands near by. Both the United States and Great Britain had claimed these islands and granted concessions for their exploitation, but as they had been abandoned, our state department held that the first to colonize them would gain undisputed possession. Relays of Hawaiian schoolboys have been paid to make meteorological observations on the islands and maintain the United States title.

The climate is warm and equable. There is very little rain. The total area of these three islands is about three square miles.

GET READY FOR WINTER DRIVING

No section of our population is more dependent upon the automobile as a means of transportation than the residents of the smaller communities and rural districts.

Yet each Fall, many car owners cause themselves a great deal of trouble and expense by neglecting one or all of the simple yet necessary steps to assure proper operation of the car in Winter weather.

A minimum Winter protection program should cover:

- 1. Complete change to correct grade of lubricants for motor, transmission and differential. 2. Motor tuned up, including adjusting of carburetor, valves, distributor, sparkplugs, generator and all electrical equipment. 3. Drain and flush cooling system. Refill with suitable anti-freeze solution.

Selection of motor oil and greases for Winter driving is particularly important. You must select an oil which will permit easy starting, that will lubricate the motor throughout the entire driving range of speeds and will continue to do so for a reasonable mileage.

For many years Quaker State Winter Oils and Greases have been recognized as the highest quality and most generally satisfactory Winter lubricants on the market.

Through Quaker State's highly developed methods and equipment it is possible to produce a motor oil which will have a satisfying body over the 400-degree range of temperature it will meet. That is, when the motor temperature is way below zero, the oil will still be fluid enough to allow the motor to turn easily and also to flow freely to all the bearings. Yet this same oil has enough body to stand up and to give the motor proper lubrication when the temperature inside the cylinder wall reaches 400° and over.

As with any other product you buy, you get what you pay for. An oil of Quaker State quality is necessarily expensive to make. This does not mean, however, that Quaker State is more expensive to use. Being pure, concentrated lubrication, it stands up longer in service. It gives more miles per quart and at the same time gives the bearing surfaces safer protection.

You will want to step into the car, even when the mercury is hiding in the bulb and press the starter with every expectation that the motor will start off with its usual Summer zest. This sure starting, plus motor protection, is only possible by preparedness.—Adv.

STAR DUST Movie • Radio

By VIRGINIA VALE

OFF-SCREEN romance is having a big influence these days in casting pictures. Paramount has given a three-year contract to John Barrymore and his wife, Elaine Barrie, and will feature them together in a picture as soon as a suitable story can be located. Making pictures with Mr. Barrymore used to be a nightmare to directors.

Some days he was three hours late showing up for work, and sometimes he disappeared for days. When he did arrive on time, likely as not he would make such caustic remarks to his fellow players that their nerves were practically shattered. Marriage to the young and ambitious Miss Barrie has changed all that. She has made him settle down to work in earnest.

Just the other day Warren Newell, a laborer at the Universal studios, wiped out the disgrace of ten years ago when he was discharged from a minor league baseball team for dropping a flyball in a crucial point in the ninth inning.

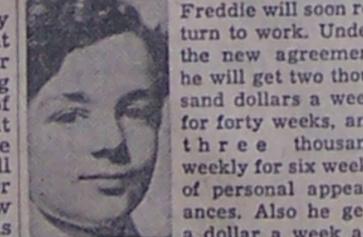

He made a real catch! Alice Faye, catching her heel in the hem of her dress, toppled over a sixteen-foot ledge and would have landed on theater seats below if Mr. Newell hadn't rushed to the rescue and caught her just in time.

Alice Faye

One of your tried and true friends of radio, whom you may not know by name, has just made a great success on the New York stage—but he is still on the air. It is Clayton Collier. You have known him as master of ceremonies for both the Leo Reisman and Eddy Duchin bands, hero of the "Pretty Kitty Kelly" sketch, and chief doctor in the story of "Girl Interne." With all his rushing about from radio rehearsals to stage performances, he never seems to be in a hurry, is always quite unruffled and casual in manner.

At last the quarrel between Freddie Bartholomew and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has been settled and Freddie will soon return to work. Under the new agreement he will get two thousand dollars a week for forty weeks, and three thousand weekly for six weeks of personal appearances. Also he gets a dollar a week additional for pocket money. He'll need it, with a twenty-five thousand dollar bill owed for lawyer's fees.

ODDS AND ENDS—Bing Crosby was so delighted with the smart dialogue in Carole Lombard's picture, "True Confession," that he insisted on having the author, Claude Binyon, write his next. It will be staged at Bing's own race track, and Mary Carlisle will play the lead, as usual, because she is the only actress Bing can make love to without making his son Garry burst into tears. Robert Taylor will be back in time for Christmas and if he ever goes away again he will insist on Barbara Stanwyck having a telephone installed at her ranch retreat. Lanny Ross, having worked over his new radio program until it suits him and everyone else, may make the next "Broadway Melody" for M-G-M. © Western Newspaper Union

Home Heating Hints By John Barclay Heating Expert

IMPROPER adjustment of the turn (or smoke pipe) damper in your furnace results in "chimney" loss of heat. Leave this damper closed as nearly as possible without retarding free burning of fuel or causing gas to escape into the basement.

Once you have found the ideal adjustment for it, be sure you leave it in that position throughout the heating season. Do not attempt to use it from day to day to regulate your fire. It was never meant for that purpose. The only time you need move the Turn Damper is at the start of the very cold season and again at the start of the very mild season. These two times are necessary to meet the extreme changes in outdoor temperature.

Use only the Ashpit Damper and Check Damper for regulating the fire daily—to speed up or slow down the rate at which you want the fire to burn. Rely wholly on these two dampers, and you'll get the proper fire regulation. I repeat—do not change the position of the Turn Damper inside the smoke pipe. Otherwise you'll waste a lot of very valuable fuel and heat.

WOMEN WHO HOLD THEIR MEN NEVER LET THEM KNOW

NO matter how much your back aches and your nerves scream, your husband, because he is only a man, can never understand why you are so hard to live with one week in every month.

Too often the honeymoon express is wrecked by the nagging tongue of a three-quarter wife. The wise woman never lets her husband know by outward sign that she is a victim of periodic pain.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife; take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Blue Moons

Once in a blue moon is supposed to mean never, or hardly ever. But we learn from a high meteorological authority that blue moons are seen.

There was a blue moon reported at Santa Barbara, Calif., last year, colored as brightly as the blue of a rainbow and seen through a thin veil of magenta-hued cloud.

A blue moon was noted by the astronomers in Ireland during the eclipse of 1927, and after the explosion at Krakatoa, when volcanic dust floated all over the world, blue moons and green were reported.

30 MINUTES AFTER Eating-Drinking ALKALIZE

AFTER A HEAVY MEAL..

.. AFTER A LONG EVENING

The fastest way to "alkalize" is to carry your alkalinizer with you. That's what thousands do now that genuine Phillips' comes in tiny, peppermint flavored tablets—in a flat tin for pocket or purse. Then you are always ready.

Use it this way. Take 2 Phillips' tablets—equal in "alkalizing" effect to 2 teaspoonfuls of liquid Phillips' from the bottle. At once you feel "gas," nausea, "overcrowding" from hyper-acidity begin to ease. "Acid headaches," "acid breath," over-acid stomach are corrected at the source. This is the quick way to ease your own distress—avoid offense to others.

This Game Called Football Has Many Confusing Angles

THIS game called football: Notre Dame and Marquette tied for three consecutive games from 1909 to 1911. In 1912 the Irish won, 63 to 0.

Year after year Pittsburgh has one of the nation's superior teams. But it has been seventeen years since the Panthers have had an undefeated team, nineteen years since they have had an undefeated and untied team, and twenty-seven years since they have had an undefeated, untied and unscored upon team.

So you're a football expert, eh? Then:

- 1.—Name the coach at Iowa university.
2.—What is the "Coffin Corner"?
3.—What time out is permitted between the first and second quarters of a game, between the third and fourth quarters, between the second and third quarters?
4.—What college team is nicknamed "The Friars"?
5.—Name the "Four Horsemen" and what they are doing now.

Sure, you knew them all along, but here are the answers, anyhow:

- 1.—Irl Tubbs of William Jewell college.
2.—The angle formed by the side line and the goal line.
3.—One minute between the first and second periods and the third and fourth periods. Fifteen minutes between the halves.
4.—Providence college of Providence, R. I.

From a Pennsylvania gentleman who so often makes this weekly football piece so easy to write:

"Football is some game! It lasts but three months, yet symbolizes college activity for the whole year. It's just an amateur sport, yet puts hundreds of boys through colleges, supplies employment to thousands and provides a good living for hundreds of coaches. It supports the athletic programs for other games, yet is played by but twenty-five to fifty boys per school. It builds stadiums, but pays no cash to the participants (theoretically, at least)."

"Its 'All-America' teams are dominated by foreign-sounding names. It's the roughest game in America, but girls love it. It's witnessed by millions each week, yet only a few hundred really understand it. It reaches its apex in the picking of 'All-America' teams when every honest fan knows one team can't honor all the best players. "Football is some game—for contradiction."

Plane Forced Down by One Grasshopper

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:

YALE football trainer Frank Wandle gets a higher salary than either Ducky Pond or Greasy Neale, the head coaches. Tennessee's football admirers still are squawking something awful about the officiating during that Alabama defeat. Although he has little time for baseball now, Jordan Oliver, the young Staten Island giant who plays so much tackle for Villanova, was being watched by big league scouts while still in high school. Ralph Wolfe, Ohio State center and captain, played 430 minutes out of a possible 480 last year. Ohio State, by the way, cleaned up a cool 40 G's on that trip to California even though losing to U. S. C.

Although six more eminent football universities were after him and his dad was willing, young John McLaughry, who is most of the Brown team, refused to listen. "I can solve at least part of your problems, Pop, and my place is here," classmates quote him as having told Coach Tuss McLaughry. During the five years their teams have clashed a Mylin-coached Lafayette outfit never has lost to one coached by Pop Warner.

His polo friends say the duke of Windsor is in better standing with British bigwigs than the press indicates. Say he really is making those trips, including the one to the United States, for propaganda purposes. Sort of a hands across the sea gesture from a popular guy in case our cousins need help later on, you know. Jockey Willie Obert, who still is riding around Rockingham park, is forty-seven years old and weighs 105 pounds. Retired Jockey Silvio Coucci is so busy playing golf that he doesn't even visit the tracks nowadays. Eastern horsemen are changing their minds about racing at Santa Anita this winter. They put the blame on California's insistence upon displaying its native son spirit. Debaters of the pari-mutuels vs. books proposition are noting that Jim Butler's Laurel, Maryland, pari-mutuel course is for sale while business continues brisk at his bookmaking Empire City.

Gloomy Gil Had Ace Record at Navy

When Gil Dobie was coaching at Navy, the Middies defeated Ursinus, 12 to 0, in 1918. Next year they slapped a 121 to 0 score on Colby. Columbia went twenty-one years without getting a man on the All-American. From the time Richard S. Smith was named at fullback in 1903 until Wally Koppisch got the halfback call in 1924. The ball wasn't equipped with handles forty years ago, either. In 1896 Penn's great guard, Willy Woodruff, fumbled five times within Lafayette's 10-yard line, and Penn lost, 6 to 4.

There has been considerable misunderstanding of the Graham plan by which the president of the University of North Carolina has been seeking to remove some of the hypocrisy from college. Perhaps a letter from a member of the North Carolina faculty best explains the university head's aims:

"President Graham is anxious to see to it that scholarships and other help to athletes shall be granted on the same terms as those on which similar favors are granted to other students. Under the Graham plan the student is required to submit a sworn statement of all monies and other help received by him together with the names of the donors. I might add in passing that since the application of this plan to our local athletic situation, there has been no great falling off in our athletic standing."

Pro Golfers Relax as Pro Football Fans

After a strenuous summer of golf, Pros Jimmy Thomson and Horton Smith are seeking relaxation by watching big-time football games.

Horton Smith

Ohio State misses Frank Cumiskey, the end now starring for Brooklyn's pro Dodgers. Against Michigan, last fall, he made three consecutive tackles to hold the foe on the one-yard line. Then, later, caught a forward pass for the first touchdown. Peter Bradley, Princeton miler who came so fast last summer, is running cross country to toughen his legs. He believes he can do 4:10 on the boards this winter and that he may get under 4:06 before June. His friends are hoping Paul Runyan soon will learn all there is to know about rhumba-ing and so resume his proper place as one of the nation's top pro golfers.

Credit the good old Dodgers with a big assist in keeping Pie Traynor's Pittsburgh managerial job for him. The team's late season spurt earned Pie another chance. Players insist the main reason for the spurt was the spark plug playing of Catcher Ray Berres, who was hauled in from Louisville where Brooklyn had traded him for Gibby Brack. Keep an eye on Maxie Farber, the young Ghetto lightweight who has been coming along so nicely. The boys claim Jesse James, Hollywood Greek grappler, came near giving Danno O'Mahoney the "business" the other night. Murray Brazen of the Dusek offices is trying to organize a team of wrestlers to play pro football.

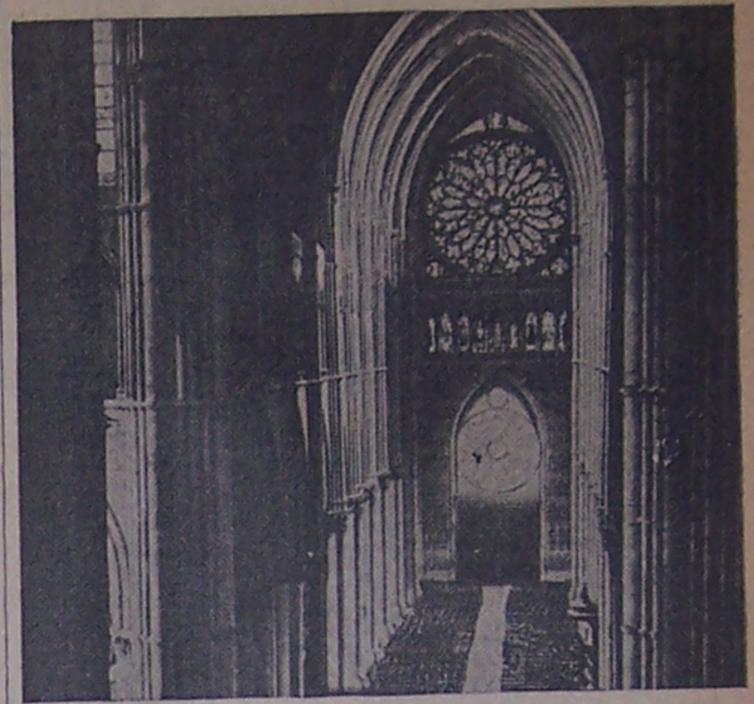

Joe DiMaggio's Ma has become an ardent baseball fan. Had an interpreter translate the World Series reports into Italian so that she could appreciate them properly. Quip by Rogers Hornsby after hearing Michigan State had defeated the Missouri eleven, 2 to 0: "They sure must use the dead ball in that league, too." One of the railroads estimates it lost $25,000 worth of business when the Giants, instead of the Cubs, won the National league pennant. Bob Feller confides that his off-season desire is to catch up on his sleep. "I'm sure tired," the famed youngster tells reporters. Best minor league managing job of the year was done by former Dodger Jake Flowers who, in his first try as a pilot, won the Eastern Shore league pennant for Salisbury.

Canine Quints Enter Kennel Show

The canine quint owned by Capt. C. S. Beale of San Diego, Calif., are hung out to dry after a good shampoo in preparation for entry into a championship kennel show. The two-month-old Boston bulls seem to disapprove of the high-handed methods used to prepare them for the event.

STEEL MAN RETIRES

Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation, who announced that he would retire next April, to be succeeded by Edward R. YOU STAY RIGHT THERE— AND I'LL MAKE YOUR BREAKFAST, TOO—

I'LL FIX UP SOMETHING TO TEMPT YOUR APPETITE

I'M NOT A BIT HUNGRY— BUT MAYBE SOMETHING DAINTY WOULD APPEAL—

I KNOW ANYTHING SOLID WILL JUST NAUSEATE ME— BUT I DIDN'T WANT TO DISCOURAGE HIM—

HERE'S WHAT YOU NEED TO FIX YOU UP— WHEAT CAKES, SAUSAGE, CREAM ETC-ETC.!

ALONG THE CONCRETE

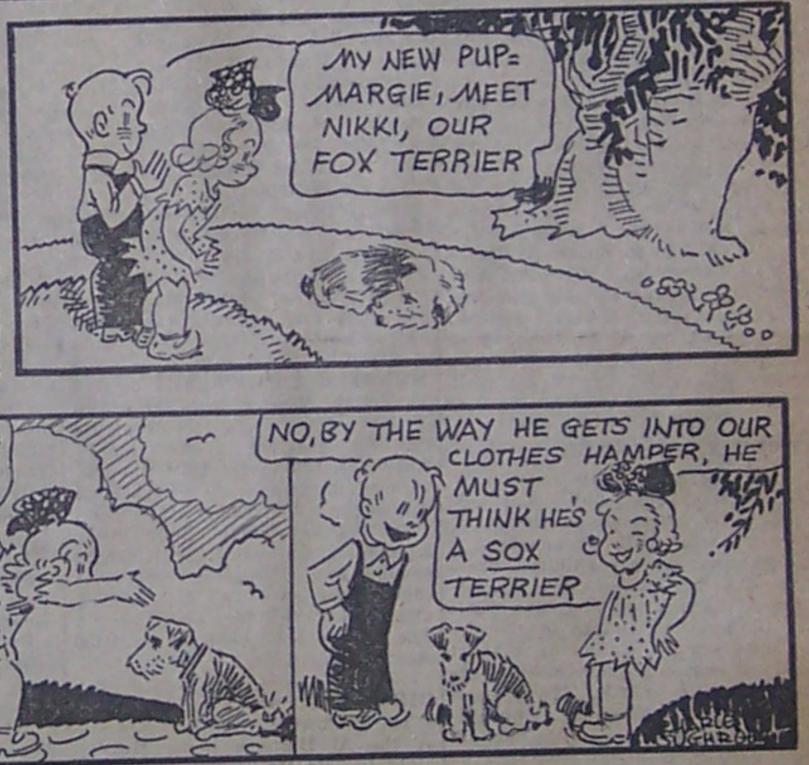

SURE IS SWELL DRIVIN' THIS TIME OF THE YEAR-- YOU CAN HAVE THE WHOLE ROAD TO YOURSELF-- REMEMBER WHEN WE DROVE THROUGH HERE LAST SUMMER-- ALL THE CARS THAT WERE JAMMED!

JOE JAY

SUCH IS LIFE

MISTAKEN IDENTITY

MY NEW PUP— MARGIE, MEET NIKKI, OUR FOX TERRIER

FOX TERRIER? ARE BIG FOXES AFRAID OF HIM? DOES HE KNOW HE IS A FOX TERRIER?

NO, BY THE WAY HE GETS INTO OUR CLOTHES HAMPER, HE MUST THINK HE'S A SOX TERRIER

ZIZZST—T—T—T!

Mr. Bass—What's that terrible racket I hear?
Mr. Perch—The Swordfish are fighting a duel for the hand of Miss Mackerel.

Nonintervention

Into the court they marched the man. The magistrate looked down at the surly prisoner.
"Well," he asked, "guilty or not guilty?"
The prisoner scowled.

Presence of Mind

"Oh, John," screamed the excited woman driver, "the car is running away."
"Can't you stop it?" asked the worried husband.
"No."
"Well, then, see if you can't hit something cheap."

Very Queer
During a natural history lesson the teacher asked the class to name an animal peculiar to the United States.
"The camel," said Henry.
"That's not a native of this country," said the teacher.
"I know it isn't," replied Henry.
"That's why it would be peculiar."

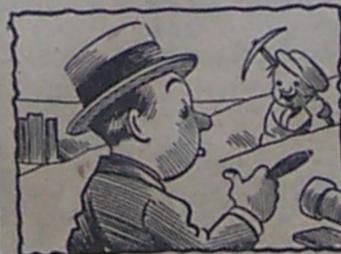

Between Us Girls
"Oh, my dear! So good to see you after five years! You're looking so much older I hardly recognized you!"
"Really, my dear? I was just thinking that I surely wouldn't have recognized you except for your coat."—Washington Post.

UP THE GRADE

"You've been having a high old time for two weeks?"
"Yep; just back from the mountains today."

BUT MAY NOT USE IT

Onlooker—I suppose you have no choice of tools?
Workman—Oh, I don't know—I have my pick.

O! O!

A salesman taking his bride south on their honeymoon visited a hotel where they boasted of their fine honey.
"Sambo," he asked the colored waiter, "where's my honey?"
"Ah don't know, boss," replied Sambo, eyeing the lady cautiously, "she don't work here no mo'."—Stray Stories.

Favoritism

Jack—There is a lot of favoritism in our family.
Uncle—Well, Jack, what on earth do you mean?
Jack—Well, I get punished if I bite my fingernails and when baby puts his foot in his mouth they think it's cute.

Generous

"Last night my boy friend gave me a dollar for every kiss I gave him."
"Why are you telling us?"
"I thought maybe you could tell me where I can buy a yacht."

Tut! Tut!

Customer (caustically)—If it were politeness I was trying to match instead of this material, I'd have a hard time finding it in this store.
Clerk (equally caustic)—May I see your sample, Madam?

Events in the Lives of Little Men

In checking a few statistics the other day I learned that fully three-fourths of all motor vehicle fatalities among children occur while the youngsters, for the time being, are innocent little pedestrians.

It seems so little to ask of men that they try just a little bit harder to protect the lives of our little folks; that they should make it a rule to drive at all times as if they were expecting a little tot to dart out into the street.

Suppose your own child should dash out suddenly from the sidewalk, yard, or school playground. If you thought for one minute that he would, you would exert undue safe practices to be sure that your child would not be injured.

It seems to be the unquestionable birth right of every child to be free from accidental injuries. Aren't they worth it?

Good Thoughts For Good People

The next document to be signed by the revolutionary rebels of all nations is a declaration of interdependence. — Rev. C. Everett Wagner.

Co-operation is not a sentiment — it is an economic necessity. — Charles Steinmetz.

Patriotism is magnificent — but it is not enough. Internationalism is not opposed to patriotism, but it is opposed to national conceit, antagonism, and conflict; to race prejudice; to national selfishness and isolation. — Bishop Herbert Welch.

He in whom there is love, considers every man his neighbor, no matter what nation he may belong to. — Tolstol.

The realization of the great truth that all are the children of one Father-Mother God, held in the bonds of unity and love, governed by divine law, rouses the thought from a limited sense of local or national affairs into the wider sphere of universal brotherhood. — The Christian Science Monitor.

All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the Lord; and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before thee. For the kingdom is the Lord's; and he is the governor among the nations. Psalms 22
