NEW CITIZENS

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Conrad of Wentworth avenue have announced the birth of a daughter on Thanksgiving Day. The baby weighed 6½ pounds at birth and has been named Carol Ann. Mrs. Conrad will be remembered as the former Ruth Fiene.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Talley of 3457 Ridge Road are the parents of a boy born at St. Margaret's hospital on November 28.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Zeltveld of Roy street are telling their friends of the arrival of a baby daughter at St. Margaret's hospital on November 29.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Miller of Ann street have named their new daughter Norma June.

The Savannah, a 350 ton vessel, which made a 26 day passage from Savannah, Ga., to Liverpool in 1819, was the first ship to use steam in crossing an ocean.

The Illinois and Michigan canal, constructed by the State of Illinois in the eighteen forties, was the first step toward connecting the Great Lakes—St. Lawrence river system with the Mississippi.

COMMISSION ORDERS REDUCED PHONE RATES

Telephone users of the state are scheduled for considerable saving under the new rates recently ordered by the Illinois Commission to be effective after January first. According to a news release from the Department of Reports of the state. This savings will total something like $5,715,000 annually.

This amount will include savings made possible by the introduction of an optional local service which gives the customer the opportunity to obtain lower charges for all calls between towns within a metropolitan zone bordering Chicago, by the elimination of the additional monthly charges for hand sets, and by reductions in other miscellaneous rates named in the order.

The telephone company has announced that it will not contest the new rates and that it will endeavor to cooperate fully with the Illinois Commerce Commission in giving the new rates a fair trial.

A. H. Mellinger, vice president, said concerning the new order: "In the hope that business will continue to improve, and in order to avoid the expense to the public and the company of contesting the Commission's order, the company has decided to introduce the new rates for trial and to ask the Commission for a revision later, if the returns do not prove adequate."

While the Commission's order will cause a greater loss of revenue than seems warranted by present conditions, it introduces some entirely new rate classifications which offer definite service improvements as well as savings to customers. In the long run it is hoped these will stimulate use of the telephoned help, in some degree at least, to off set the immediate revenue loss.

VILLAGE CLERK REMINDS OF VOTE REGISTRATION

Letters reminding the citizens of the village that they must register if they are to be eligible to vote in any primary, general or special election conducted in the village or state, were mailed out by Henry Boender, village clerk, this week with the water bills.

The letters were a courtesy on the part of the village to remind residents that under the new permanent registration laws in Illinois every voter must be registered in the permanent register if he is to cast his vote. This reminder seemed necessary in view of the fact that so few persons responded to the registration when officially conducted some weeks ago.

Under the law voters may register at the village clerk's office from Dec. 6, 1937, to Jan. 20, 1938 during regular office hours which are from 8:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. week days and 8:30 to 12 noon Saturdays, except holidays.

After this period the register will be open at the clerk's office each year from the first Monday of May until the first Monday of October; the third Tuesday of November to the third Tuesday of January, and the law states that it shall be unlawful for any person to vote unless properly registered.

LIONS SPONSOR BASKETBALL FOR VILLAGE YOUTHS

One of the civic projects being sponsored by the recently organized Lions club of Lansing is the new basketball team composed of youths of the village who are not in school. Emil Rauguth is managing the team and Don Shelton, former Burnham coach, has consented to coach the team which practices every Tuesday night.

Practice games are now being scheduled and the team has been invited to join a Calumet City League, also the Burnham league. No decision has been made as to the leagues, there being some difficulty as to the balancing of weights of the teams with the Burnham league and one of the new team's players, J. Jurecki, also plays with a Calumet City team.

The lads who have found a place on the Lions team are: R. Brown, F.; "Red" Ritter, G.; A. Milazzo, F.; K. Brady, G.; Joe Jurecki, C.; R. McClokey, G.; J. Milazzo, G.; R. Blank, C.; M. Padjen, C.; Franklin, G.; Stewart, F.; R. Vealemp, F.

Due to the lack of facilities and the cost, at the Coolidge gym, Rauguth has arranged for the use of the Munster public school gymnasium by the Lions team. There the boys have the use of showers, and there is also space for spectators at the games.

mandy. She lived for nine years in this cloister, hidden from and unnoticed by the world outside. In 1897 she died, and was buried in the common cemetery of Lisieux.

During her life in the convent, she had, at the command of her superiors, written a brief sketch of her life and her spiritual experiences. Two years after her death, this autobiography was published. Immediately, the humble, unknown Carmelite nun became known the world over, and the sleepy old Norandy town awoke one morning to find itself famous. This autobiography of the Little Flower has been translated into nearly all languages, and millions of copies of it distributed throughout the world.

JOHN SCHURINGA RECOVERS FROM SERIOUS ILLNESS

Village president, John Schuringa, is again able to be about the affairs of the town after having been confined to his home for more than five weeks with a serious attack of pneumonia.

There were several times during his illness when fear was held for Mr. Schuringa's life as he lay unconscious for three or four days.

The whole town offers him congratulations on his recovery and joins in saying "We're glad you are well again, Mr. Schuringa."

BUS HITS CAR SATURDAY A. M.

VILLAGE GETS DAMAGE IN KIKALOS ACCIDENT

A South Shore bus ran into the rear of the Dodge car belonging to Clarence Ruark of 18427 School street Saturday morning about 6:30, smashing in the back of the car.

The mishap was at the intersection of Ridge Road and School street. Ruark came to Ridge Road turning east from School street, the South Shore bus evidently failed to notice the car and swung around a truck going west on Ridge Road. When Ruark saw that the bus would hit him, he pulled his machine off the road but not before the bus hit the rear of his machine. No one was hurt.

Village Gets Damage

In the case of Spiros Kikalos, the driver of the celery truck that was hit by a village garbage truck here last week, damages in the amount of $30 was collected from Kikalos and he signed a release to the village of responsibility in the accident.

Kikalos' truck was struck by the village truck at Ada street and Ridge Road Monday, November 29, when he pulled onto the through street directly in front of the village truck.

LOCAL CLUBS ASKED TO PASS BUS RESOLUTION

In preparation for the public hearing before the Illinois Commerce Commission on the granting of a permit to the Safeway Bus Company to operate a bus line through the village of Lansing into the loop district of the city of Chicago, Mr. William Winterhoff this week sent resolutions to various village organizations asking them to co-operate in obtaining the much needed transportation by signing the resolutions.

These resolutions will be presented to the Commerce Commission with the petition asking for the permit for the proposed bus line, as evidence of the need of the line.

Mr. Winterhoff as president of the Lansing Lions club is acting as spokesman in the local effort to obtain the line through the village.

The need of transportation from Lansing to the loop district of Chicago has long been a keen one and when William Erfert, acting as a representative of the village board, was able to interest the Safeway Bus Company, which is considered one of the finest and best bus lines operating in this region, in outlining a route through Lansing, his report was received here with enthusiasm.

A public meeting was held at the village hall attended by most of the public spirited citizens of the village and a vote was taken approving of the route as proposed by the bus company and when the Lions club offered to handle the work of preparing evidence to present to the Illinois Commerce Commission showing why the village needed the new service the offer was accepted.

AMERICAN LEGION TO ENTERTAIN 8TH DISTRICT THURS.

Officers and members from the 17 Posts of the 8th Illinois District of the American Legion are to be entertained in Lansing on Thursday evening December 2 by the Edward Schultz Post, according to an announcement made by local officers this week.

Fred Leach, of Chicago Heights, the District Commander is to preside at the meeting and other officers of the various Posts will take part in the business discussions and talks that will constitute the evening program.

George Peterson, Commander of the Post says he is anticipating a large turnout and so the Lansing boys have engaged Dick Wiersma's hall at Ridge Road and Williams street for the meeting, and extensive plans are being made for a pleasant social time after the business session.

There are seventeen Posts in the 8th district of the legion and once each month a district business meeting is held, the various posts taking turns in entertaining the district group. This promotes good fellowship and allows the local posts to keep in close touch with the activities of the other groups. The American Legion maintains a home in Normal, Illinois for the orphan children of veterans, keeping a cottage for each district and the posts of the district unite in caring for the children of the district.

District 8 has seventeen children in its home, thus there is a child for each post to care for. This is only one of the many services carried on by the Legion.

The Edward Schultz Post is also decorating a booth at the Parent-Teachers carnival at the Coolidge school Friday evening.

Japan Demonstrates Man Power in China

When heavy rains make roads impassible in North China for Japan's highly mechanized artillery and commissary units, the Nipponese warriors simply lay aside their weapons and supply the motive power as shown here. One of two starters to finish, he discovered that the car which the promoter promised would take him home failed to appear.

THE LEAKY SCHOOL BOAT

A double page cartoon and editorial note published in The Illinois Teacher for November presents the dilemma of the Illinois public schools in no uncertain terms. State government, pictured with a big cigar and high powered speed boat is passing up the distress signals of the school boy who is stranded in a sinking row boat. The boats are increased state income and decreased assessed valuation property tax, respectively.

Figures in the editorial make more plain the meaning of the picture, showing how two taxes substituted for the old state property tax, namely liquor tax and sales tax have produced more than $91,000,000 while the old property tax as of 1933 produced only $24,000,000.

The schools are dependent almost entirely upon property tax, most of which is delinquent and curtailed in amount due to decreased valuation. The small sum of $11 per pupil allotted as state aid for the elementary schools doesn't cover the loss taken by the schools in their regular source of income, property tax.

Illinois is one of the richest and proudest states in the union, she controls a vast amount of the nation's wealth, her officials have been very clever in devising means to increase the general state income through new tax ideas, she is very progressive in almost every feature, yet she ranks 35 or 36 in the national list of public school adequacy. That, it would seem, is an unnecessary blot upon the state and its people.

Another generation and the wealth, future and income of the state will rest in the hands of the children now being pinched by way of education. How will they be able to meet the demands of progress if the only thing they have learned in penury in a land of plenty.

The whole world is rapidly changing, and the youth of the state must have the proper background and education to enable him to hold his own in the world of tomorrow. They can't acquire that education on a curtailed 1933 property tax income.

One of the most disastrous things that will happen to the Illinois schools unless the problem of adequate school income is met shortly, is that intelligent folks will no longer look upon the underpaid teaching profession as worth the required effort, and before many years only the lesser talent will be directed toward the school teaching profession. Today many able teachers are accepting better paying positions outside their chosen field. Some Illinois school districts pay their teachers as low as $400 per year. Disgraceful.

As The Illinois Teacher points out the state government is the individual as represented in Springfield by a senator, three representatives and a governor. It is up to the individual to do something about the situation, not just pass the buck by letting the state do it.

Individual letters to state senators and representatives can produce results. There is no reason why the state cannot allow other sources of income to the schools besides the old shabby property tax. It would be sound judgment to buy a speed boat for the schools even if it has to be paid for from some of the new fancy taxes such as liquor, sales, etc.

Editorial Notes

The growing use of the school building as a center of cultural and social life of the community is one of the significant trends in modern education.

More than a million three hundred thousand children have been enrolled in the public elementary and secondary schools of Illinois. This action on the part of the parents and children should serve as a direct challenge to those charged with the organization and operation of the schools to measure up to the expectations of those who are making possible the existence and continuance of the individual school units.—Educational Press Bulletin.

"Nor is the problem of serving the schools merely that of rescuing them from difficulties, of increasing their facilities and raising their standards. Throughout the entire study of the educational problem there is apparent the need of a greater public consciousness of education and a deeper understanding of its services. There is a word for that from which the schools must be saved—and the word is apathy. And thus it is to the understanding of education, to a greater concept of its problems and opportunities, to an appreciation of the meaning of teaching and the contribution of the teaching profession, that the Monitor's series is dedicated.—Christian Science Monitor. Nice Things

For Old Dreams

Where do dreams go when they are old,
 And their new glitter worn?
 When robes of gold and silver
 Are threadbare, tattered, torn?
 Do they sit close at home with you
 Cross-kneed upon the floor,
 Or do they tramp the dusty trails
 Begging from door to door?
 If you should find a hungry dream
 At your back door today,
 Please ask him to remain a while—
 Do not send him away.
 For I have lost my old day dreams,
 dreams,
 And I would like to see,
 If they, whom I remember,
 Today—remember me.

STATE EXHIBITS AT INTERNATIONAL SHOW

"Bargain Seeds" analyzed in dollars and cents is one of the interesting features of the State Department of Agriculture's exhibits at the International Livestock Show held in Chicago this week. J. H. Lloyd, Director of the Department of Agriculture announced today.

L. A. Moore, superintendent of the division of plant industry, is in charge of the seed exhibit which also includes photographs of modern methods of weed control and eradication.

To impress Illinois farmers with the importance of good seed, the state department of agriculture made an official analysis of a bushel of so-called "bargain" sweet clover seed. Bags containing the weed seeds and inert matter show at a glance that the $5.90 bushel of "bargain seed" cost the farmer at the rate of $11.80 per bushel. Seed testing 99.5 per cent pure could have been purchased from regular seed dealers for $8.40 per bushel.

An other exhibit is a large transparency showing the major attractions of the annual Illinois State Fair. A huge sign, "Governor Horner invites you to the Illinois State Fair, August 13 to 21, 1938," is over the array of transparent photographs which tell their own story.

Something pulled at her eyes like a magnet. She looked up. A group of men was standing near the steps. All wore white suits with blue shirts and identical ties of Java print; each one had a boutonniere of deep blue bachelor buttons in the lapel of his coat; all were smiling broadly, she could feel their repressed excitement. Mark Trent was with them. His face went colorless with surprise as his eyes met hers in the instant before she bent her head again. Why was he here? Was this the fete a bunch of friends had urged him to attend?

The stairs. One! Two! Three! She was up. The bridesmaids had deployed to face the audience—she had almost thought "congregation"—the orange-color frocks were at the ends of the semi-circle, the tints paled till they came to the snow-white bride. Her veil had been thrown back. Time for her to turn. The music swelled into a paean of triumph. It looked miles to the iron grilles beyond which stood Madame Celeste. She was safely down the steps! She must smile.

"Ready!"

She heard the whispered word, saw the men in white who had been standing beside the stairs hurdle the guarding ribbon. One offered his arm to her. Urged huskily:

"Quick! Let's put it through!"

She looked up. Mark Trent! All the bitterness and pain went out of her heart. It was as if a great wall she had built between them had crumbled to a heap which she could cross. In a flare of gorgeous happiness she slipped her hand under his arm.

"It would be you," she said, and smiled in the second before they were in step with the music. Behind her she heard peals of laughter, girls' voices, men's voices. Then applause. A woman called:

"How priceless! The men are coming out with the bridesmaids!"

Brooke stepped at the intricate iron grille. She withdrew her hand from Trent's arm, walked back a step or two, tossed her bouquet among the bridesmaids, waited to see it scatter in four parts, turned, and ran out through the gateway to the limousine.

Reporters and camera men flocked after her. Machines clicked. Mark Trent fairly lifted her into the car. He blocked the door from curious eyes as he bent forward and kissed her on the lips. It was a tender kiss. There was reverence in it, there was a promise in his eyes, but laughter in his voice.

"That's an important part of the ceremony, isn't it? Hold out your left hand, Brooke." He pressed a ring on her finger. "This is what I had for you."

He turned away as Madame Celeste hurried up.

"Back to the salon!" She gave the order to the chauffeur with the air of a queen on location. She pushed aside billows of tulle, and sank into the seat beside Brooke who hid her left hand in the satin folds.

"Will our fashion show crash the front page, cherie? I'll say it will. I had a feeling something was in the air when I saw that bunch of swell men by the steps looking like a lot of kids with mischief sticking out all over them. They rate a thousand dollar bonus from Carston's Inc. What publicity! Handed to us on a silver platter! You should have seen the bridesmaids coming down the aisle. Each one with an escort who looked as if he had stepped off a fashion page of Vanity Fair. It was a riot. The man who played groom was the top-notch of a bunch of top-notchers. Hollywood is his home."

As she drove home from Carston's Inc. dressed in the tweeds in which she was to travel, Brooke kept looking at the ring on the third finger of her left hand.

The soft flush of a tropical evening was stealing forward when she entered the patio, the glamour of night was settling over the dark mystery of the sea. The afterglow turned the masts of the distant yacht to red gold. Birds twittered sleepily. The fronds of the royal palm stirred gently. A man who was pacing back and forth came toward her quickly. Brooke's pulses which had been none too steady broke into a quickstep.

"I thought you would be flying through the air by this time, Mark," she tried to say indifferently.

"Did you think I would leave my bride?"

She avoided his disturbing eyes.

"Bride! The wedding party turned into a riot, didn't it? It was fun. Great theater."

"Just a minute, dearest. Stop and get your breath while I explain my part of it. I told you that I met some men I knew this morning. They were all excited over a plan to surprise a wedding party at a fashion show with groom and ushers; they were a lot of boys all set for a lark; made me feel young just to listen to their fooling. When I found you wouldn't play round with me I joined them. I didn't know till the last minute that they'd picked me for the groom—not a tactical selection, and I refused the offer. But when I saw you coming up that aisle—well, they would have had to battle over my dead body to take my place. Forgive me, will you?" His caressing voice sent a ripple along Brooke's veins.

"There's nothing to forgive. I thought it was fun."

"Then we'll let that ride for the present. We've got to hustle. I have a message for you from your mother."

"From Mother! Where did you get it? How?"

"You dear! I phoned her ten days ago."

"Phoned! Not to England."

"To England. It's being done some, you know."

"Of course I know. Don't, don't be so wooden."

"Wooden!" His laugh sent Brooke's hands behind her to clasp each other. "First I was a silent policeman, now I'm wooden. That also we will take up later. I didn't know what you had written your mother about the new will. I thought she should understand that your income was the same as when she left; otherwise she might not dare spend money to rush home for the premiere of Sam's play this week."

"It is not the same as when she went away."

"Your mistake. It is. She arrives in New York tomorrow."

"Tomorrow! I don't care what it costs. I'll fly."

"I thought you'd feel that way. I have reservations for us for the night plane." He glanced at his watch. "Throw some things into a suitcase, air-weight, remember. I have a car outside. We have just time to make the flying field."

Was she real, was anything real, Brooke asked herself, as the automobile burned up miles and the broad road flowed away from it. It was alive enough now; the Palm Beach world was hastening to eat, drink, and be merry. Above, through the warm black velvet dome, dripped a million or two stars. A magic night. Shining automobiles, gracefully long and low; others, silent, powerful, fast, provided glimpses of gay wraps, films of chiffon, glints of lame, smooth heads, waved coiffures, sparkling jewels, the sombre black of evening clothes. Chairs propelled by boys with faces dark as chunks of obsidian held gayly appareled occupants. She glanced at Mark Trent beside her. Was he real? As if he had divined her question, he touched the ring on her left hand.

"Like it? Is it big enough, gorgeous enough?"

"It's perfect."

"Then you'll wear it always, won't you? You know that I love you, have loved you from the moment I caught you up from in front of that roadster, that I want you to marry me, don't you? You didn't think for a minute that I would leave you behind here, did you?" His hand tightened on hers.

He caught her close. His eager, ardent lips on hers stopped her unsteady voice.

The car drew up with a jerk. The driver pulled open the door.

"We made it, boss—" He stopped. Put his full-moon face into reverse. Reminded of his shoulder:

"You've got three minutes. Boy waiting for your bags. If you've decided not to go—"

Mark Trent jumped out. Turned to Brooke.

"Coming?"

She put her hand in his, avoided his eyes as she stepped to the ground. Great twin motors purred beyond an open gate at the starting apron. A giant torchlight swept the sky. From a passing car drifted a man's voice singing:

"You may not be an angel
But angels are so few,
That until the day one comes along
I'll trail along with you."

Brooke said breathlessly:

"Is it real? Will you trail along with me? Do you love me, Mark?"

His hand tightened on hers. Something in his eyes took hold of something deep in her soul.

"Love you! That's a slight understatement, but we'll let it pass—for the present. Are we going to New York in that plane?"

"I'm sorry. I—"

Mark Trent's laugh was young and buoyant.

"Don't apologize."

"I'm not apologizing. I'm just explaining." Brooke retorted gayly, as hand in hand they raced toward the great winged gray monster already quivering into life.

Trim Young Man
By DOROTHY MILLS
© McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

EUNICE HATTON, bobbed haired and completely a la mode, patented her marcel into place and sat back to wait for the rising of the curtain. It was Rotary night at the Shelbourne theater, and, incidentally, a new leading man was to make his appearance. Either of these added attractions was sufficient to bring forth a representative of the press, and Eunice, efficient young person that she was, carried within her calfskin bag a badge which identified her with the Daily Bulletin. Her manner was slightly bored, because she was new at the work, and boredom, that easy boredom which tokens sophistication, seemed to her just the proper attitude for the blase lady reporter.

But Eunice was young, and it would have been a very blase person indeed who could have been really bored when the curtain rose, revealing a trim young man in riding breeches, soft shirt and sombrero.

But it was still a blase young woman who, back-stage after the final curtain, asked to speak to Mr. Jack Gade.

"Good evening," said Eunice, professionally, to the broad back in the brocade dressing gown.

"Oh, good evening! Won't you sit down?" The trim young man removed a pair of shoes from the other chair.

"I'm from the Daily Bulletin," said Eunice, looking for the first time full into the provocative eyes.

"I like your performance this evening."

"Oh, I'm so glad! But then, we had a good play to work with, you know."

"Yes, I know. I'm here to get an interview with you, Mr. Gade. You know the kind of stuff—where, you came from, what you've played before, and how you like the city."

"Oh, yes. But there isn't much to tell. I was on Broadway last season, you know. And I've played practically everything. And you may say I like your city. In fact," and he looked at Eunice appreciatively, "I like it more every minute."

"Oh," and the blase young lady blushed a warm pink. Then, after a second's pause, she threw down the gauntlet. "I suppose you must be rather lonesome, though. I mean, you probably don't know many people here?"

"No, I don't, and there you have my chief trouble. I've been here only a week, and we seldom meet any but theatrical people. Of course, we have every evening, but there are only two matinees a week. That leaves four afternoons to kill." He paused while Eunice waited expectantly.

"Perhaps—" he ventured.

"Yes!" said Eunice, squinting in response.

"Well, I thought you might be willing to take lunch with me tomorrow. And perhaps by then I will have thought of something more to tell you about myself. Will you come?"

"Why, yes. I have to have the interview, you see."

"Oh, is that the only reason?"

"And I liked your performance."

"Well, that's encouraging, anyway. Then, say, at the Rochester at 12? I'll meet you in the lobby."

"Very well. Good evening."

"Oh, but you haven't told me your name."

"Miss Hatton."

"Haven't you a first name?"

"Not yet."

The sophisticated, indifferent Eunice got as far as home and shut herself in her room before she stumbled to the romantic, thrilled little girl who demanded recognition. It was still the second Eunice who persisted in going to the office the next morning, denying even a business-like attitude to the newspaper Eunice.

And when, at 11 o'clock, a messenger asked for Miss Hatton, it was still the second Eunice who tore open the envelope with nervous haste and read: "Am so sorry cannot meet you this noon. Will explain as soon as possible."

At 12:30 it was the professional Eunice who sat at a white-topped table in a cafeteria and exchanged office chat with another efficient young woman in a tailored suit.

"Oh, my dear," said the other efficient one, "have you heard the latest? Let's see, you covered the Shelbourne last night, didn't you? Well that new leading man—handsome, isn't he?—he's only been in town a week, but his wife is here and is going to sue him for divorce. Wonderful story. And when I was coming out of the Rochester a little while ago, after getting the list of new guests, what do you suppose? Why, I saw him at a corner table with that little Simms girl that works over at the Hoton shoe, and who was mixed up in it, affair last month. My dear, what's the matter? Don't you like that salad? Well, I never liked shrimp, either."

And yet Mr. Gade, he of the provocative smile and the friendly squint, never could understand why, when he called in the afternoon and invited this young person to a late lunch following the evening performance, he was answered by: "Sorry, Mr. Gade. Had to have the story, you know; so I saw your manager this afternoon. What? Lonesome? Then I should recommend you to our Lonely Hearts column. Some people get results that way."

Had Special Gibbet for the Use of Alchemists

The medieval alchemists did not enjoy a very high social standing. It was popularly believed that they consorted with demons in their efforts to learn the secrets of nature. Moreover, as time went on the profession was afflicted with an increasing number of charlatans, more adept at extracting gold from the pockets of gullible patrons than from lead. Consequently alchemy was officially frowned upon by both church and state, according to an authority in the Chicago Tribune.

Men of keen scientific abilities, like Bacon and Aquinas and Raymond Lully, were compelled to keep their scientific interest as secret as possible. Bacon, one of the greatest scientists of all time, was threatened with imprisonment by Oxford university unless he ceased experimenting. The Dominican order prohibited the study of alchemy among its members. In 1404 all alchemists were ordered to leave England, although this edict never was thoroughly enforced. On another occasion a certain duke of Wurtemberg, who probably had been fleeced, erected a special gallows for the exclusive use of alchemists. Appropriately, the frame was gilded.

Because of the need of secrecy, and because they believed that the common knowledge of how to make gold would do away with the divinely ordained poverty of the masses, the alchemists either kept notes in code or described their experiments in a fantastic jargon that both amuses and exasperates translators. For instance, they called gold the red lion, silver the lily bride, sulphur the yellow scorpion, mercury the dragon, and lead the black crow. Some of their terms may still exist, as in aqua regia (royal water) sal ammoniac (salt of Ammon), oleum (oil of vitrol), sugar of lead, butter of antimony, and cream of tartar.

Pelicans Experts at Soaring

Pelicans are experts at soaring, or sailing—often flying at heights out of sight. Although the birds fly in wheeling circles they move on their course rapidly. Their breeding grounds are principally in the Northwestern states and in Southwestern Canada. They winter from Northern California, in the Gulf States and Florida, along both coasts of Mexico, and in the interior of Mexico as far south as Panama.

T. F. METEOR

Written by students of Thornton Fractional Twp. High School

On November 15 the student body at Fractional witnessed for the first time the awarding of major and minor monograms to the South Suburban League champions and the lightweight team.

Superintendent A. V. Lockhart gave the introductory speech and then introduced Coaches Petree and Miller who spoke on the splendid efforts and ability of the team.

Mr. Erwin, president of the league athletic committee, then presented Captain Fred Dahlkamp with a trophy and Judge Martin Fineran presented each major letter man with a gold football.

Coach Young of the lightweights then awarded minor letters to the Meteorites.

Heavyweight men who received monograms are: Capt. Fred Dahlkamp, Walter "Champ" Pawlowski, Eugene Petersen, James Rider, Carmen Madalon, Robert Lange, Billy Kohler, William Jones, John Sabados, Joe Pawlowski, George Laczny, Bob Vander An, Ray Melcher, Peter Chapelle, Ray Paschke, Carl Wulffing, Eugene Coyle, Edward Stokes and Elmer Szeplinski.

Members of the lightweight squad who received letters are: Capt. Dick Dermody, Jim Coffman, Wilbur Coles, Edgar Cusick, Sidney Eby, Bud George, Earl Mueller, Bernard Nondorf, Frank Pawlik, Joe Reed, Ellsworth Sherrow, Zigmunt Skorupka, Bud Thompson, Henry Vensel, Mike Zarney, Hubert Zeleski, Leonard Nowakowski, Steve Marciniak and William Bell. Fractional for the eighth consecutive time gave away Thanksgiving baskets to the needy last November 24. The project was headed by Miss Schmidt and as-isted by several girls and boys. Forty-six baskets were delivered to needy people in the vicinity.

Fractional's first debate appearance was a clash with Harvey, Ill. and attended with great interest by some 400 T. F. students. Elaine Howmiller and Naomi Frevort supported T. F. on the affirmative side of one question, and John Trehallas and Joseph Zygmunt defended the negative on the second debate. As this was just a practice debate, no decision was rendered as to the winner.

In a recent Schick test for diphtheria fever, given at Fractional High, it was discovered that 77 of the 236 students who took the test had positive results. Dr. Nady and Dr. Bascomb will give toxoid to all of these 77 who desire to be completely immunized against the disease.

After a sale of 400 Fractional emblems to net $8, the Girls' Club board at Fractional has sold an entire order of magic slates and are now making arrangements for a new order to accommodate those still desiring a slate.

BOWLING

By R. O. Hecht

BOWLING

Last Thursday (Thanksgiving Day) afternoon, the Walther League team met and defeated the powerful Cherrie Pickers. This match game was one of the finest and best ever bowled on the local alleys. The Cherrie Pickers rolled a good score of 2770 but the Walther League team rolled a little better with a total of 2816 to win by a margin of 46 pins. Carl Hecht rolled the best series with a total of 606. Rein Schultz and Ray Blank each had a 231 game while R. Hecht had a 223 and C. Hecht's high was 221.

The Major League is in one of the tightest races for league leadership that has ever been witnessed by the Lansing boys. Auto Inn is at present in first place with 21 wins, 12 defeats. They have a team average of 806. Mikos are in second place, having played three games less and have 19 wins, 11 defeats with a pin average of 812. Then comes a three way tie for third place between State Line (19 wins, 14 losses—Ave. 820), Kraay Bros. (Ave. 798) and Dockwellers. The latter two teams having also won 19 and lost 14. Ridge Road Gardens and the Knot-holes are close behind in fourth place with 18 wins and 15 defeats. All in all, the race is tight and may be the best team win.

In the Minor League, things are loosening up a bit and one team, Lansing Pharmacy, is pulling away from the rest and now command a five game lead over their nearest rival for the first place position. Lansing Pharmacy won three games last Monday night from the powerful Meeter men and sent the Meeter boys down into the same class with the Padjen men. Padjen managed to get two games from the Lansing Motors and thus tied Meeters for second place. Panny's Clowns took two from Gids while Slogers took two from Louie.

NEW DOCKS BEING CONSTRUCTED IN LAKE CALUMET

The Municipal Docks in Lake Calumet were under construction this week according to Alderman Arthur G. Lindell. The C. E. Carson Company whose bid of $91,675 for this work was accepted by the city, began moving pile drivers and auxiliary equipment on to the site at 128th street and Stony Island avenue last Monday. Mr. Carson informed the alderman that the steel was already ordered and prompt delivery was expected. The construction is to be rushed as the weather conditions will permit. Specifications and plans call for the building of 900 feet of dock with the latest type of steel piling. The construction of this dock is only the first step in the building of the terminal. The federal government has already completed dredging the channel to 28 feet. The project for the grading of the site is awaiting the approval of the WPA. It is expected that the terminal may be completed with the railroad connections and warehouse in 1938.—Dalton Pointer.

STAR DUST Movie • Radio

DEANNA DURBIN will do a play on Broadway early in the spring if all the experts concerned with her upbringing agree that it won't be too much of a strain on her.

Any decision affecting her welfare has to be pondered over by her mother, her manager, her vocal teacher, and the physician at Universal studios and they are all a little reluctant about adding any further public appearances to her already very public life.

Deanna Durbin

Deanna could go light-headed about her work at motion-picture and radio studios, but lately she knows that it is a source of worry to everyone.

All the tumult and hysterical shouting over Fred Allen's return to his radio program does not mean that Walter O'Keefe is being neglected or forgotten. O'Keefe so endeared himself to radio listeners while he was substituting for Fred Allen that he could have walked right into another big program, but he demanded a vacation first.

When a young newcomer to the screen steals most of the glory away from two enormously-popular stars, you can expect to see her in bigger and better parts right away. So, when you see Loretta Young and Tyrone Power in "Second Honeymoon," be all ready to clap hands for Marjorie Weaver who is the outstanding hit of this gay and giddy comedy.

By far the gayest and most delightful of the new pictures is "It's Love I'm After," featuring Leslie Howard, Bette Davis, and Olivia de Havilland.

It does not sound new, because old story is that old, the matinee idol, the spitfire leading woman who is in love with him, and the moonstruck young woman who blindly adores him.

Leslie Howard is new in the refreshing, witty treatment the story has been given. Never before have the three featured players been so deft.

ODDS AND ENDS—Gertrude Berg says fairly snowed under with flowers recently when she rounded out eight years as author, producer and star of "The Goldbergs." ... Dolores Costello makes her comeback to the screen in "Girls on Probation" ... George Raft is determined to be a director some day, so he has agreed to work as an apprentice in various technical departments of the studio in order to learn the business thoroughly.

Address Invitations to Wedding Tactfully

DEAR Mrs. Post: Our families are both large and I really can not include all the children at my wedding, so must end the lists with aunts and uncles.

Answer: To emphasize the fact that they are not invited would be needlessly cruel, especially if some of them have been looking forward to a wedding in the family.

Use of Monograms.

DEAR Mrs. Post: What is the proper arrangement of initials in a monogram? I am thinking now of the monogram that has a taller initial in the center.

Answer: When the initial in the center is larger it is always the initial of the surname. It is proper, if you like it, to have the address stamped on the flap of the envelope paper marked with a monogram.

When Not to Tip

DEAR Mrs. Post: I have gone for years to a very expensive hair-dressing establishment and have always left a tip for those who take care of me.

Answer: Unless the restaurant or the hairdressers have signs plainly explaining that no tipping is permitted, you would be expected to tip at the usual rates.

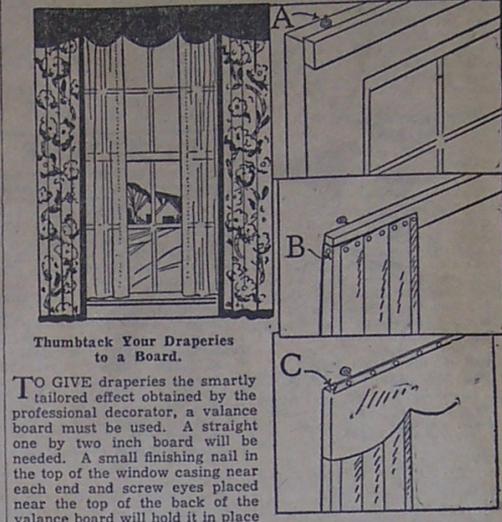

Proper Invitation Form.

DEAR Mrs. Post: Will you suggest a form for an important dinner to be given by the children of a couple who are to be honored on their fiftieth wedding anniversary?

Answer: The pleasure of (name written in) Company is requested by The Sons and Daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Fifty Years on the occasion of their Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary on Tuesday, the tenth of February at eight o'clock Hotel Uptown State Drinking Your Bouillon DEAR Mrs. Post: Is it proper to pick up the wide bouillon cups and drink from them? They seem almost too large, but my husband insists that their handiwork is only intended for ornamentation.

Juvenile Togs Styled to a Nicety

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

NEVER, no never, have children's winter outfits been so cleverly styled as they are this season. It is not only that each is a "picture" in its bright colors and cunning details, but when it comes to being practical and protective from the elements and snugly "comfy" at all times, as fond mothers insist must be, designers have so painstakingly equipped outfits for the younger generation with "all modern improvements," cruel winds, wet-wet rain, dancing snow flurries, not even Jack Frost himself have even a ghost of a chance to get in.

As pictures speak more eloquently than all the adjectives that might be penned, let's look to our illustration for enlightenment as to what leading designers are turning out in way of children's cold-weather suits for now and the winter to be. Here we see three cunning, and as thoroughly practical as they are attractive, ensembles that all but "stole the show" as the little girls who modeled them came stepping down the runway at a children's style clinic which was held in the Merchandise Mart of Chicago a short time ago, before a vast audience of visiting merchants.

To the fond mother who delights in seeing little daughter look as if she had just stepped out of a fashion plate, the clever ballerina-back legging suit pictured to the left will prove a real find. It is one of the newest models and forecasts what the fashionable little miss will wear through the winter. Of handsome Copenhagen blue sturdy woolen coating it is styled in a novel manner of seeming to achieve a clever ballet flare. The suit has a beaver collar which, of course, will make a hit with any little girl, and crowning glory over all, it has a matching hat with fur trim. The zipped leggings offer every protection from wind and cold.

Dewberry (a new shade this season) is the color featured in the voguish fitted coachman-style coat to the right. Here is a type that will make best-dressed little girls look even better dressed for it carries an air of distinction in its every detail. Has a cape too, and when little daughter's friends see that cape they will be imploring mother to buy them one.

An adorable outfit made of a maize-colored wool of caressing softness costumes the little snow queen centered in the group. She looks just that, what with the fluffy snow-white angora edgings that trim bonnet, coat and muff. Yes, there's a little matching muff as you can see and with what pride and glee the fortunate wearer will call her admirers' attention to this precious possession. And to fill the cup of joy full to overflowing there are dainty little sprays of flowers hand-embroidered in the sweetest colors on the yoke and on the wee muff and on the very flattering matching bonnet.

And, by the way, since cunning winter ensembles for little folks is our theme, if there be a doting relative that longs to bestow upon your child a grand Christmas gift why not just throw a gentle hint to him or her in regard to the fur coat, muff and hat ensembles that are so pridefully shown in this season's juvenile apparel shops and departments. Or if you are thinking in terms of practical school or play-time clothes why not one of the pretty sweater and suede jerkin sets that come in such attractive colorings? Or a dressier threesome consisting of velveteen hat, coat and legging set, for legging sets are the big idea this season.

NEW BAGS ARE GAY IN CARVED HANDLES

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Suede antelope "mam'selle" handbag trimmed with catalin. Like other items in the fashion category such as apparel, jewelry, hats and even shoes, handbags now have acquired distinctive names indicative of the types they are designed to please. Mam'selle bags, which are now being shown in many shops in black, brown, burgundy and other colors, with carved catalin handles or decorations, are generally jaunty in type but not gaudy and as their names indicate, made especially for mam'selle.

WHIMS OF FASHION

Costumes glitter day and night with sequins.

Flowers and plumes will trim headdresses for wear with evening gowns.

Suits for every hour of the day are featured in Paris winter collections.

Suede jewelry is something novel for the sportswear enthusiasts to consider.

Fur-trimmed coats and capes to match tweed suits are selling well in the shops.

Double-breasted sports coats with high revers are featured for autumn by Paris houses.

Exquisitely fine zibelines and zibeline broadcloths (a new description coined this season) make coats for winter formal wear.

Home Heating Hints

By John Barclay
Heating Expert

IT DOESN'T pay to neglect your heating plant when you know you have a good fire but the heat is below par. You run up fuel bills and make for yourself a lot of trouble and worry which could be avoided.

There are literally dozens of things that make a "sick" furnace refuse to deliver sufficient heat, and unless you are familiar with heating plants, it will pay you to call in a competent furnace man. For instance, the check damper may be placed wrong; the turn damper may be out of position; the regulator may need adjustment; there may be caked soot in the smoke-pipe or on the heating surfaces; radiators may be wrongly pitched; draft may be partially choked; a loose bolt or a rusty joint may be wasting heat.

Those are just a few of the common things that can keep a furnace from delivering enough heat. If you cannot locate the cause quickly and easily, don't take a chance on wasting fuel money. A service man will "spot" the trouble promptly and soon put your heating plant in comfortable, healthful, economical working order. Send for him immediately. WNU Service.

Good Thoughts For Good People

There are many people who fear solitude, confating it with loneliness. But in solitude there is always, or there may be, divine companionship.
 —Archibald Rutledge.

They are never alone that are accompanied by noble thoughts.
 —Sir Philip Sidney.

When we know ourselves, our potentialities, our limitless power, our birthright as the sons of God, we shall never be lonely, but we shall love to be alone.
 —Fanny de Groot Hastings.

Alone? Alone?
 None is alone!
 For where is one,
 There He is too.—

No man goeth alone!
 —John Oxenham.

Are we carrying a load of loneliness? Even if we are in a solitary place, divine Love is there to make the solitude glad with the revealing of that truth which the physical senses cannot perceive, to enrich our thought and lift it above self, so that we can emerge!

from our present condition with open arms and giving hands, happier and more useful than we have ever been.
 —The Christian Science Monitor.

The Father hath not left me alone; for I do always these things that please him.
 —John 8.

Clint Frank, Rams Leading Performers in Football World

SOME day I am going to learn to say "No" in the manner of those big personality boys whose square chins adorn the success ads. Meanwhile it looks as though I am hooked again. On the desk there is the regular weekly assortment of invitations to serve (gratis) on various committees to name the sports greats of the last eleven months. Obviously, such a task should only be undertaken by those supremely confident that they are divinely guided. With millions of boys and girls straining muscles daily for the sake of Alma Maters, or merely for the fun of it, a lone mortal's a sucker for thinking he has a chance to guess right.

Nevertheless, having always been a pushover for guessing games, I have been devoting the last two and three-quarter minutes to the requests. Herewith are the answers: Best football player of the year—Clint Frank of Yale.

Best Eastern football team—Fordham.

Best football team—Fordham. Best amateur athlete — Johnny Goodman.

Five greatest athletes of the year—Henry Armstrong, Clint Frank, Don Budge, Charley Gehringer, Johnny Goodman.

UNTIL 600 millionaire stockholders were overcome by their own ineptitude, Madison Square Garden was the biggest name in the prize-fight business. Watching the show at the St. Nicks the other night and listening to the oldtimers' gossip, I was reminded, though, of something. It is that boxing never could have prospered in New York save through the diligent efforts of the small-club promoters.

St. Nicholas Palace Rich in Memories

In recognition of these men, the ambitious kids willing to chance beatings and small purses for the sake of future fame, and the fans who long have supported them so loyally, I am starting a new series. Other fragmentary sketches, written in the attempt to catch the spirit of these Bulwarks of Boxing, will follow from time to time.

St. Nicholas Palace (this year renamed the Royal Windsor)—It was here that Diamond Jim Brady, a regular ringside patron, jumped up from his seat to present Ted Kid Lewis with a diamond pin from his tie after one of Lewis' swell brawls.

A boisterous place it was soon after it came into being 36 years ago. Jim Buckley heaved a cop out of the window one night when boxing was banned in New York and the law tried to stop one of Buckley's membership shows. An injunction, granted by the late Mayor Gaynor, permitted Buckley to run his shows, and he refused to let anything prevent him from doing so.

Many a pickpocket was loose in those unhallowed days, too. It was here that Joe Humphries jumped into the ring one night when two battlers were heaving leather. "Better keep your hands in your pockets, boys. You, too, Al Smith," Joe roared. "A couple of boys from downtown just walked in."

When Willie Jackson Fought Johnny Dundee

Of course, there were more dignified proceedings upstairs, just as there were down in the basement, where Princeton's great Hobey Baker started his hockey career.

Jimmy Johnston brought Jem Driscoll and Owen Moran here first to astound local fight fans with their skill and speed. Gunboat Smith, in his debut at St. Nicks, hit his opponent so hard that the fellow's left shoe went flying through the air.

Abe Attell used to come here. Stand with the gambling gentry in the back and wager all the bobs he could on himself. After a hasty visit to the dressing room, rush into the ring and give one of his greatest exhibitions.

Willie Jackson fought here. Life has not been entirely kind to Willie. He gets in on Annie Oakleys now when he visits fight clubs. But once he drew over $10,000 against Johnny Dundee at this club.

A guy had to be good to draw that kind of money. But good ones were always fighting at the St. Nicks. Jack Blackburn, trainer of Joe Louis, got his start here. So did Mexican Joe Rivers, K. O. Brown, Jack Dillon, Mike Gibbons, Tom Kennedy, Leach Cross and, oh, so many others.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE: COMMANDER ANDY McFALL, graduate manager of athletics at Annapolis, thinks the present Bill Ingram is the greatest of all that famous Navy family so far as all around athletic ability is concerned—Bill's a baseball slugger as well as a smooth basketball guard and almost everybody knows what he can do on a football field—Now that King Clancy has retired Aurel Joliat holds the National Hockey league continuous service record. He's starting his sixteenth season with Les Canadiens—Among other very good reasons why Helen Willis will not turn pro is the fact that tennis promoters will not offer enough money. They say she would be a good draw with the Park avenue trade on a one night stand but would flop on the road—Herb McCracken, former Lafayette football coach, now devotes himself to publishing a scholastic magazine and scouting Columbia for Stanford. He rates Mayberry of Florida as the best back he's seen in years.

Wrestling moguls are in the midst of a new under-cover peace conference. This time they claim order can be established in their pretty profession if the Dusek boys are left out in the cold—Bill Stewart, National league umpire and Chicago

TRACK STAR AT 75

Like Tennyson's brook, Hugh Kent of Carpentersville, Ill., apparently intends to roll on forever. With 54 years of competitive track events behind him, the seventy-five-year-old athlete can still show a clean pair of heels to many of the youngsters. He is shown demonstrating the crouch start now in general use by runners. In the beginning of Kent's career the standing start was in favor.

Black Hawks manager, is the only American born hockey boss but he is not the only American citizen. Detroit's Jack Adams took out his final papers last summer—"Funny thing about that touchdown we scored against Navy," says Columbia's Sid Luckman. I yelled: 'C'mon, gang, let's go 75 yards for a touchdown.' And we did."

Pudge Heffelfinger, all-time Yale great, picks Hector Cowan of Princeton as the best lineman he ever saw. He calls Bum McClung of Yale and Willie Heston of Michigan the best backs... Chuck Good, whose dad writes sports for the Toronto Star, will play center for the Bronx (hockey) Tigers this winter.

Cuyler Slated for Syracuse Manager

Word is out that Kiki Cuyler will manage Syracuse in the International league next summer... The reason for Minnesota's failure to score more often was the absence of Ed Widseth's down field blocking. The big fellow really wiped 'em out last season, just as he recently did for the Giants.

Although the jobs pay $25 a night plus $6 for expenses, referees shy away from Canadian-American Hockey league assignments. Too many fans like to heave pop bottles in too many of the towns... Harry Morrissey, the celebrated race starter, who died last week, liked to be called a "commencer."

Brenner, flashy Piebe back who lost out at Navy last year because of eye trouble, is expected to star for Stanford in 1938... The Middies stand to lose another budding Grange in Hardin, a husky linesmacker who is having study difficulties... Harwood, center, and Lenz, back, are the best prospects now with the Piebes... Down in Maryland they say that a 145-pound Washington college senior named Hugh Gibbons Young could make any team in the country. He is a triple threat who never gets hurt, backs up a line like a Mallory and runs the 100 in 9.6... Lou Fink, who used to train Gene Tunney and Tony Canzoneri, now is doing the same for John Hay Whitney, the boss man... War Admiral and American Flag, both sons of Man o'War, are the only celebrated three-year-olds of the last seventeen years to go through their season undefeated.

Bowling shares popularity with hockey as Winnipeg's winter madness with 120 alleys being grouped in one area near the center of the town—A week or so ago, while mentioning the number of married men among the hockey Rangers, this misinformer clean forgot that Ott Heller became a husband last summer—Informed football men will tell you that the field judge, whose job is the newest of the four, is the most important official operating on the gridiron. If he is as active as Tommy Degnan or Shorty Miller, to mention two very good ones, he is always in a position to spot those down-the-field fouls which win or lose games—Joe Medwick broke into professional baseball under the name of Mickey King—New York will bid for the public parks tennis championships for 1939, the World's Fair year.

Notre Dame's first football game was played against Michigan in 1887. The Wolverines came to South Bend a day in advance of the contest so that they might instruct the green Irish as to how the game should be played. They did such a good coaching job that they won only by 8 to 0.—Marshall Newell, one of the four men to be placed on Walter Camp's All-America team for four years, was one of the lightest tackles of all time. Fully equipped with a Harvard accent he weighed only 156 pounds—Yale beat Dartmouth, 113 to 0, in 1884, but even at that there were some compensations in being an Indian gridiron warrior in those days. The athletes were fed rare roast beef three times a day and for dinner each of them had two mugs of ale

Feather Thrower in the Toils

The feather-throwing pacifist, Frank W. "Woody" Hockaday, whose motto is "Feathers instead of bullets," is hustled to the cooler after strewing feathers over civic and American Legion officials who were reviewing a patriotic parade in Wilmington, Del.

ANOTHER CARUSO?

Shown during a rehearsal for his appearance on a radio program is Enrico Caruso, son of the famed operatic tenor. Young Caruso's favorite number is a song beloved by his late father, "O Paradiso," from "L'Africaine." While critics declare he is a promising singer, they do not predict a career paralleling that of his father.

ASKS RAIL BOOST

John J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads which has applied for a 15 per cent blanket increase in freight rates, points out that during the past four years, due to causes beyond the control of the railroads, there has been an increase of $663,303,000 per year in the roads' operating costs.

He's Britain's Robert Taylor

Known as the "Robert Taylor of England," Don Stannard, the British actor who is under contract to make movies in Hollywood, obligingly acts as a writing desk for Binnie Barnes, also a British film star, as they arrived in New York recently.

LITTLE FLOWER NOVENA
AT ST. ANN'S CHURCH

The marvelous deeds of martyrs and saintly heroes down through the centuries, contain nothing that quite parallels the sudden and meteoric rise to world recognition of the cloistered Carmelite nun of Lisieux in France whose short career lasted but 24 years. The world-wide honor paid to this simple nun who died in her cloistered home unknown to the world and whose name is now invoked by millions of Catholics in confident prayer, is one of the wonders of hagiology. The devotion to her has captured the Catholic world with a speed never equalled by devotion to any other canonized Saint.

The Little Flower when dying gave voice to prophetic promises which seemed wholly at variance with any possible expectation of fulfillment. She herself was a poor, powerless, unimportant nun, dying unknown in a little obscure town of Normandy, France. Yet, today, her prophecies, "I will spend my Heaven in doing good upon earth," "After my death, I will let fall a shower of roses," are being literally fulfilled by the marvelous favors which the millions of her devotees over the world claim to have received.

The Novena exercises and sermons will be given by the Rev. Alfred Gilligan, O. Carm. Father Burke, the pastor, expects a large crowd of his parishioners of St. Ann's Church to make this Novena in preparation for the coming feast of Christmas.

POSTMASER PREPARES FOR CHRISTMAS RUSH

lighten the tremendous job that faces the department during the month of December. There is much that the public can do to help. In view of the fact that this year there are more than a hundred new families in Lansing the local postmaster estimates that this year's business will nearly double that of last. Therefore, in order that the postmaster and the employees may serve with the best efficiency, co-operation from the public is necessary.

mellite nuns at the early age of 15 at the Carmel of Lisieux in Norway. A point that is stressed each year in connection with Christmas mailing is this: that the patrons should be careful about putting on a plain address. A clear, clean and legible address helps in speeding up the mail and insures correct delivery. The local postmaster would appreciate it very much if all Lansing patrons would advise their correspondents to put on the box number on mail addressed to a Lansing patron.

Packages should be wrapped very carefully and securely packed and tied, do not seal packages as this will subject them to first class postage. All fragile articles should be packed in excelsior or in paper packing and packed in corrugated paper boxes. Packages should be insured against loss and damage. Packages that are intended for delivery by Christmas and still have a long way to travel should be mailed as soon as possible, especially those having a foreign destination. There will be no delivery on Christmas day except that of special delivery packages and letters.

One of the things that affects the efficiency of service in the local post office is the fact that so many patrons fail to provide for the delivery of their mail other than by general delivery. Postal regulations state that any patrons establishing their residence in a town or village should provide to receive their mail through a post office box. General delivery is intended for transients only. Those patrons that have their own post office boxes could save the postal force much time if they would learn to open the boxes assigned to them. Parents should instruct the children to refrain from coming to the post office every ten or twenty minutes and causing the clerks to take time out to ask them what they want.

Patrons applying for money orders should, according to regulations, have their application blanks properly filled out. These blanks are to be filled out by the remitter for various reasons, one is that it eliminates the possibilities of mistakes through misunderstanding on the part of the clerk. Secondly, it saves much time for the clerk. If the clerk must first fill out the application blank and then the money order, the transaction took him just twice as long as it should have, because he did just twice the amount of work that he should have done.

Other information that is generally asked for by the public is the rates of Christmas cards and letters. Christmas cards bearing no writing other than the seasons greetings such as "Merry Christmas," "Seasons Greetings," etc., and the sender's name may be sent in UNSEALED envelopes at the rate of 1 1/2 cents for each envelope up to two ounces in weight. Any card bearing a written message or any card filled out in writing such as invitations, announcements, etc., must be prepaid at the first class rate of postage which is one cent for drop letter rate in Lansing and three cents per ounce for out of town mail. A card or letter mailed in Lansing and sent to a party in Lansing may be sealed and sent for one cent per ounce. One disadvantage that the 1 1/2 cent rate offers is the fact that it cannot be forwarded in the event that the addressee has moved. Much 1 1/2 cent mail is undeliverable and never reaches the party it was intended for. If you are not sure of the party's whereabouts, it is best to use the first class rate and then your mail will be forwarded in the event that a forwarding address is on file at the last post office. For further information see your postmaster.

ILLINOIS STATE NEWS

The annual sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals was opened in Illinois by Governor Horner in a Thanksgiving Day address broadcast from Springfield. Likening the tiny emblems to the banners of an army that marched to save, not to destroy, the Governor urged all citizens of Illinois to buy them freely and cheerfully.

Illite, a recently identified potash mica occurring in shales, promises to furnish an inexhaustible supply of potash as fertilizer for Illinois farms. Identification of this important mineral was made by the college of agriculture,

University of Illinois and the Illinois state geological survey.

The first break in more than 30 years in the steady upward rate of Illinois deaths from heart failure occurred during the first nine months of this year, Dr. A. C. Bette Davis and Henry Fonda in "THAT CERTAIN WOMAN" Now Showing at the Paramount Theatre

Bette Davis walked straight to America's heart with her very first picture and early won the Academy Award. But never until now has she had a story that called for sublime understanding of human emotion — a story worthy of Bernhardt or Duse. With the presentation of "That Certain Woman" the screen has today a name great enough to be bracketed with those honored names of yesterday—that of America's own — Betty Davis, who is co-starred with Henry Fonda in "That Certain Woman" now showing at the Paramount Theater through Saturday. The supporting cast includes Ian Hunter, Anita Louise and Donald Crisp.

Every day the papers write of hunting accidents. "Hunter accidentally shot." Rifle or shot gun explodes when hunter drops gun." And so on.

A loaded gun should not be taken into a house, hunting shack, or car. Many times some other person tries out the "sight," pulls the trigger, and a fatality is the result. Pulling a loaded gun through a fence by taking hold of the barrel is a dangerous stunt.

Do not clean a gun until you have made positive inspection of chamber and barrel. Never point a gun at anybody. It's a foolish and senseless action.

The supposedly unloaded gun is the gun that has killed many people. If you cannot handle a gun, stay away from it.

LOCAL CLUBS ASKED TO PASS RESOLUTIONS

The bus line as proposed by the Safeway company would connect with that company's present Chicago route through Dolton and Riverdale. It would come from Dolton through Oak Glen on Torrence avenue, east on Ridge Road and north on Wentworth through Calumet City and back through Dolton with terminal downtown in the Chicago loop.

Rates as included in the proposal are very reasonable, going as low as 27 cents for one way ride from here to the city.

A delegation of citizens will be asked to travel to Chicago to attend the Commission hearing and back up the resolutions. It is expected that every organization in the village will be very willing to pass the resolutions, which were worked by the attorney who is conducting Calumet City's drive for the bus line.

With both local municipalities pulling for the line, and local citizens already pointing out to the competing bus companies who now operate the bus line from Lansing to Hammond that the new line as proposed would in no way interfere with the present and future business of the present lines, it may be that opposition to the petition will not be so very strong. With a direct to the loop bus service it is expected that Lansing's growth will be greatly increased. This of course would effect a substantial increase in business for the present Hammond bus line.

The resolutions, sent out this week after they have been signed by the club or organization president, should be returned to Mr. Winterhoff who will assemble them and present them to the Commerce Commission. Should any club or civic body fail to receive a resolution one may be obtained at the Ford Sales room at Ridge Road and Ada streets.

Ask Me Another

A young man was showing his girl through a factory. They came to a boiler.
 "What is that big thing over there?" asked the girl.

 "So what?"

AT IT AGAIN

"What are you so furious about, my dear?"
 "Mrs. Smith just called me an old cat!"
 "The beast—you're not old!"

Bloodthirsty

It was a good play, but one man in the gallery started to boo.

 Then, amid the scuffle, a mild little woman in the stalls below stood up and cried excitedly:

A NEED FOR WATER

Staying at a boarding house was a young man not noted for his early rising. One morning about six o'clock he surprised the landlady by walking into the kitchen in his dressing-gown with a small medicine glass in his hand, and asked for some water. She filled the glass and he returned to his room.
 Three minutes later he returned with the same glass and same request, still yawning, and five minutes later he again asked her to fill the glass.
 "Whatever is the matter? Aren't you well?" asked the landlady.
 The young man yawned. "I'm all right, but my—my room's on fire!"
